Preamble

If you're reading this, We're sure you're already aware of what Brickadia is. We are also sure you've already read the original document posted around a year and a half ago. This new document serves as an extension of the original to expand upon discoveries made surrounding the special interests of a specific Brickadia dev (ex-dev?), Port. Of course, if you haven't read the original document, you can do that here. We highly recommend it for the proper contextual intricacies of this scenario. Criticisms of the facetious punchiness relating to the general group zeitgeist towards Brickadia developers in that period aside, as well as its hurried nature to bring those troubling facts to light in an attention-gathering fashion, it contains practically all historical information regarding the dives into the team's individual behaviors. In the future, a rewrite and combination with this document for ease and posterity are potentially down the road.

This document here, like the previous, will exclusively focus on the questionable personal actions of the development team, that endanger the possible children they are offering a service for. There will be no indulgence in debate of Brickadia as a game itself, nor your opinion for or against its moderation or community. In this case, we will be building upon the case of the previous document against the developer Port. If you were previously unaware, Port was engaged (unknown if presently so) to the fired developer Evar Smith. Now, Evar Smith was removed from the development team for a myriad of reasons, including but not limited to, drawing shotacon, indulging in fetishes related to underage children, possible grooming, and distributing his child porn drawings. Somehow, Port was given plausible deniability despite evidence (admittedly limited) pointing towards his encouragement of Evar Smith's behavior, and as well as being in a romantic and sexual relationship with this man. Today, with the new evidence we have gathered today, will establish the concrete nature of these previous accusations.

Just to contextualize, Wrapperup has recently made a comment on a Brickadia-related criticism video in which he admits a MAJORITY of new Brickadia players are coming from Roblox. The children's lego website, of course, where the predominant age is 16 and under. If half of your development team has either in the past or present expressed sexual interest in any form of child pornography (cub porn, loli, shota, the real thing) or engaged in grooming activities, especially when your game is a lego sandbox that appeals to young children, there is likely a major issue.

Here is most of the comment. The video can be found here. The important information to gather is that, stated by a dev of Brickadia, "most people seem to come from ROBLOX surprisingly" (Paragraph 5). Additionally, if you are a former Blocklander, we will bet money on the fact you probably started playing the game while you were underage, most likely pre-adolescence.

Hi. Incase you don't know, I'm a developer for Brickadia. Perhaps this comment comes a bit late, but I've wanted to clarify and comment on points in this video for a while, but I just didn't feel like I needed to because it hurts to see a video like this. Rant and wall of text ahead.

First, microbricks. I don't like microbricks either, but they're a valid way to build. I think it more highlights the issue about there being a lack of useful brick types in the game, and people use microbricks instead to achieve the thing they want. We're always making optimizations to make bricks run faster. It's a bit of a silly point in this video lol.

Second, moderation. It's a hot topic, especially as of late. While I don't think the video paints a fair picture about what actually goes down with moderation, I agree with the point of having us (the devs) help moderate the game is not a good idea. The way you showed sixmorphugus giving out random warnings to Luigi is not accurate to what happened. I've been pushing the idea to keep us from moderating the game. For the most part, the general goal of moderation is to keep the chat and game civil, the main intention of the in-game moderation is to deal with players who go server to server breaking the rules (for example, spamming the n-word across different servers). Discord moderation is of course a lot stricter, but getting banned from discord does not mean you get banned from the game (this originally was the case, but this has changed a long time ago). We also want to decouple the game and the discord, but it requires some infrastructure changes to happen before we can do so. It's the result of the once private dev discord channel having some public channels for a small number of testers exploding into the public discord server you see today, it's a bit hard to decouple the dev and discord community channels unfortunately.

About the Blockland hate, I also agree. I wish people would be less cult like about it all, they're both valid and awesome games. That being said, yes, Brickadia is based on Blockland, but also of course its inspired by LBP/Dreams (ps4) and ROBLOX. Many of us dissociate with Blockland not because it was a bad game, but because we hate many of the assholes the game still harbors. Most Blocklanders are awesome people, the Blockland hate is targeted at "that section of the community". You know what I'm talking about. To say Blockland wasn't a HUGE inspiration for Brickadia would be a disservice to what all Blockland has done for many of us. I definitely wouldn't be a software engineer without Blockland.

Of course, I don't control what people say about the game. That is entirely their own opinion. Some people hate Brickadia and love Blockland, some hate Blockland and love Brickadia, most people seem to come from ROBLOX suprisingly, maybe they heard about Blockland and heard this new thing thats kinda like blockland is coming out called Brickadia. Anyway, this whole spiel about censorship is honestly bullshit. Most of the people we ban are the ones harassing other users consistently or being assholes (or you know, spamming the N-word and other slurs across different servers). We wanted Brickadia to be more approachable to a general audience. I'm pretty sure even celau agreed on this point when I talked to him a long time ago.

The very last point in the video... I really don't want to talk about but the way it has went down was probably the worst way it could have went down. Fuck pedophiles.

We've tried dealing with the issues as much as we can, I mean is anyone REALLY prepared to deal with someone you considered a friend who turns out to be into that shit? The first time was a real shellshock to many of us on the team. We removed her (the dev in question) from the team as soon as the tweet from J (the victim, not actual name obviously) came out. We talked with J about it, and she was the one who suggested we stay private about it, and we agreed. At the time we felt like we were protecting the victim, but in retrospect we should have come out about it publicly because people found out anyway and believed we were just trying to cover it up. Keep in mind the incident and removal of the dev happened over a month before the drama came public. In reality, we stayed private about it because J wanted us to stay private about it.

The second incident was also just terrible. I am endlessly pissed about it, and still am. I don't want to name any names (as they have also been censored in this video), but I can give context: The person (I'll call them "K") who shared information about A (the dev we removed, not actual name) is not a reliable narrator. Before we removed him from the team, this narrator, K, has been dealing with a ton of drug abuse and mental health problems throughout their lives, and from what I can gather, A and their partner have tried helping them back to sobriety and better care in their personal life. Regardless, K out of the blue sent our lead dev Zeblote some information about A being into... stuff. We looked into it, couldn't find how A was connected to those accounts, asked A about it... etc. The information K sent Zeblote wasn't very useful in helping us figure this out at the time. At that point, we probably should have removed him even if we didn't have any solid evidence linking him to the accounts. Once the doc came out, we were able to link the dots and we removed A from the team an hour or two later.

You won't believe the fucking pain and stress I dealt with THAT morning. Again, I am endlessly pissed about it. Anyway, don't call us fucking "pedophile enablers". We hate pedophiles. They need serious help.

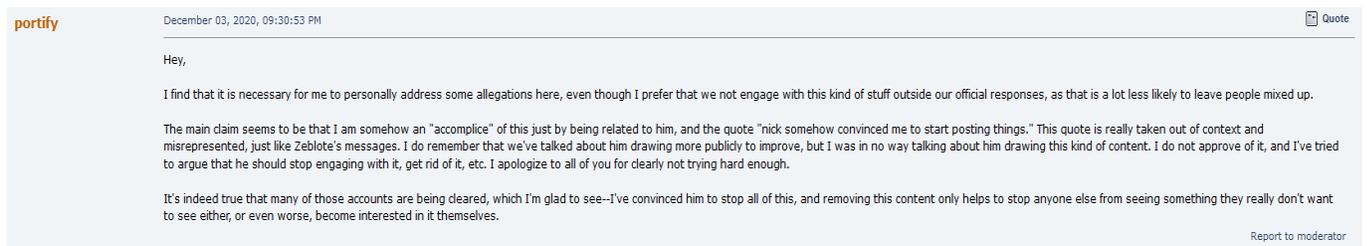

Of course, I don't control what people say about the game. That is entirely their own opinion. Some people hate Brickadia and love Blockland, some hate Blockland and love Brickadia, most people seem to come from ROBLOX suprisingly, maybe they heard about Blockland and heard this new thing thats kinda like blockland is coming out called Brickadia. Anyway, this whole spiel

The Ballad of Nicolai Susemihl

Port is, at one time, someone who held a large amount of influence in the Brickadia community. Some may have considered him one of the lead coders for the project. Recently though, around October or November of 2021, his name was wiped off the credits list for the game silently, and internally he was demoted. Not to say he hasn't worked on the project since, he is still called for free labor occasionally. For lack of a better colloquialism, the Brickadia devs have Stalined him out of the picture. But why?

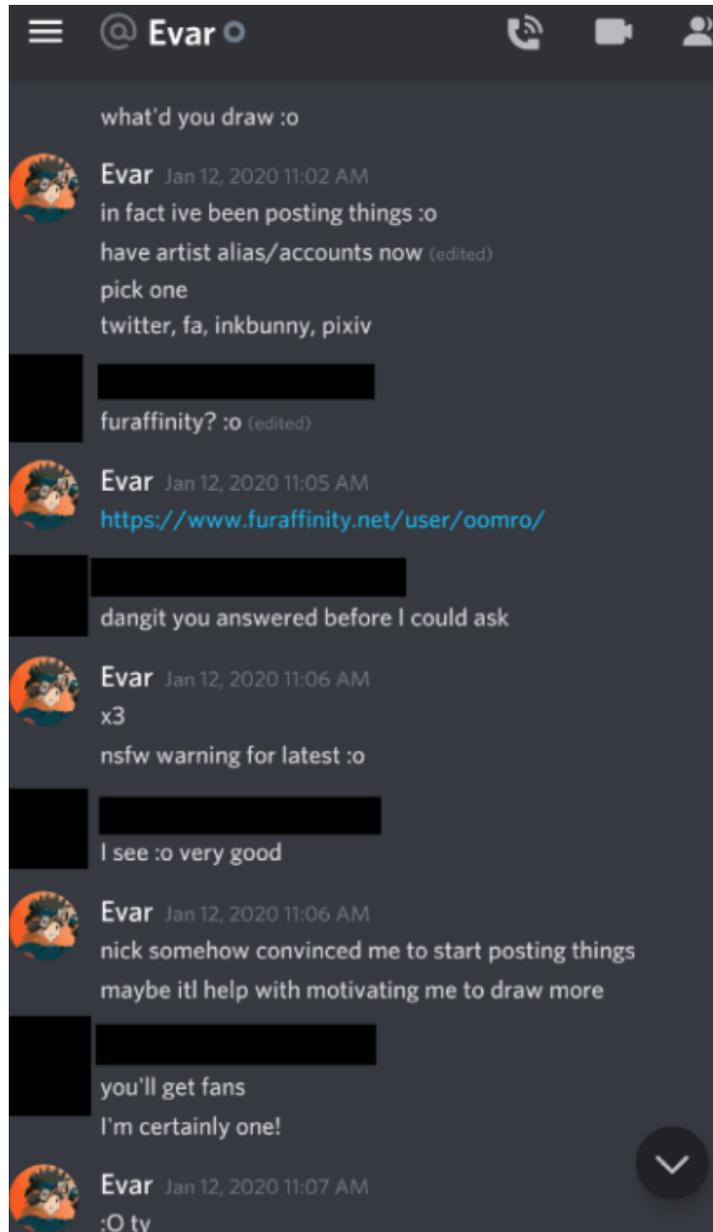

Not that us at Block Gang know the exact motivations behind the cogs in the Brickadia machine... however, some new information about Port has come to light that could possibly have damaged Brickadia's already questionable reputation regarding the credibility of their developers resisting the temptation of wanting to masturbate to child drawings on the internet. Scathing remarks aside, any sort of action taken would be preemptory and opaque to prevent any sort of consequences, like the ones our last document spurred. Just a theory, though. Regardless of Port's current status of servitude at Brickadia, we must acknowledge that not only is he a critical figure in community and in development, but he is engaged to Evar Smith. A very personal relationship indeed. And the rest of the development team knew this, very well so when Evar Smith was being exposed for his antics.

Now, you will be a bit intrigued to hear that Port had actually responded to the original document's thread on the Blockland Forums. His first post reads,

The screenshot shows a forum post by a user named 'portify' on December 03, 2020, at 09:30:53 PM. The post contains three paragraphs of text. The first paragraph says 'Hey,'. The second paragraph states: 'I find that it is necessary for me to personally address some allegations here, even though I prefer that we not engage with this kind of stuff outside our official responses, as that is a lot less likely to leave people mixed up.' The third paragraph reads: 'The main claim seems to be that I am somehow an "accomplice" of this just by being related to him, and the quote "nick somehow convinced me to start posting things." This quote is really taken out of context and misrepresented, just like Zeblote's messages. I do remember that we've talked about him drawing more publicly to improve, but I was in no way talking about him drawing this kind of content. I do not approve of it, and I've tried to argue that he should stop engaging with it, get rid of it, etc. I apologize to all of you for clearly not trying hard enough.' At the bottom of the post, there is a line of text: 'It's indeed true that many of those accounts are being cleared, which I'm glad to see--I've convinced him to stop all of this, and removing this content only helps to stop anyone else from seeing something they really don't want to see either, or even worse, become interested in it themselves.' A 'Report to moderator' link is visible in the bottom right corner of the post area.

To summarize, he claims that he has zero approval, and has never encouraged, the drawings Evar had created. In fact, he even convinced him to delete all shotacon accounts, not out of a cover-up, but out of trying to encourage him to seek actual help. Contextually, this forum post is a response to this screenshot.

Nick is referring to Port in this picture. Examine the date of this chat-log, it will be essential for correlating evidence further down the road. Essentially, this screenshot is Evar admitting that his fiance Port encouraged and supported him in drawing shotacon. Port in the thread says this is the opposite, and no further evidence comes to motion during the lifespan of the thread. End of story.

Except not so. We can assume that the post by Port is at least moderately duplicitous in nature relating to his true intentions. In fact, on the very same forum, Port has engaged in a significant amount of questionable sexual activity.

Exhibit A: The Fetishes of Nicolai Susemihl

Now, there was a bit of discourse in the legacy thread about the document on the Blockland forums relating to how permissible fetishes are in relation to developing a lego game that is usually populated by adolescents. The main idea being, should someone with hyper-sexualized or normally deviant interests be in charge of a community of underage players? (We are considering developers the heads of community in Brickadia, they certainly function beyond their roles to perform a good chunk of the moderation, so it is a completely fair assumption).

Here at Block Gang, we hold the belief that hyper-sexualized/fetishised people do not make the best online role models for lego games where children are most likely interacting in that community. You may disagree. However, hopefully objectively, anyone with interests in bestiality, loli/shota/cp/other pedophilic-substitute content, and other severely depraved things, should certainly not be any positions of internet power in young communities.

Now, if you consider the fact that anyone with such a giant list of fetishes is possibly not in the best mental state, we can call some specific ones to note. Fur/paws, loli, hebephilia (attraction to early adolescents), “siscon” (incest with your sister), incest in general, and so on. So, Port has self-admittedly shown interest in incest, underage people, and possibly bestiality (we will get to that later). This stands in direct contradiction to Port’s statement saying he would never encourage or show interest in such things. Port and Evar seem to share very similar special sexual interests, as many engaged couples do, which makes it seem bizarre that he would try to claim otherwise.

Some of these may read like jokes, and indeed, this is how these posts were interpreted at the time. However, we know that Port is actually, and self-admittedly, into loli and underage people. Irony, and humor in general, usually come from a place in reality. With this in context, the complete lack of shame is a bit off-putting, not to mention the predatory nature of the message Port sends in the first screenshot that betrays interests beyond simple humor.

You may notice a majority of these screenshots originate from a period of 2012-2013. However, the final one is from 2016, and is still a reaffirmation of Port's lasting interest in shotacon, the art Evar primarily drew. The screenshot where Evar says Port was encouraging him to draw shotacon is from 2020. This is not an interest that has gone away. Just one that has been buried as his role in the lego game successor had become more central.

We have covered Port's interest in "fur" and "paws" before, leading to an interest in furry content. However, you will come to find he also sanctions bestiality. You can argue the slippery slope of the furry to bestiality pipeline, regardless, there is concrete evidence of Port possessing another interest that is wholly illegal, and one he shares with Evar Smith. Notice the second example, Port edited his comments in late September of 2020, nearly 2 months before the original document was publicized, and at the near peak of his involvement in Brickadia. There are many other posts where he has edited out his responses as well. This is a clear admission of recognized guilt. The original quote is preserved in Steve's post, where we see Port brags about the legality of bestiality in his home country. The fact that Steve quips that Port practices it is concerning in hindsight.

Context for the second image, Clone v.117 posts a megadump of loli (self-admitted in other posts of his) imagery, Port replies on the next page stating it makes him aroused. He tried to edit this post out again, but somebody had quoted it on the same page, no image of what Clone posted on p244, it's disgusting and you can check for yourself if you really want.

On September 29th, 2020. Port decided to edit the content of a large majority of his posts pertaining to his attractions to minors, animals, lolis et cetera, after years of having them up no less. This occurred less than 2 months before our first document was released. Not only is this action an admission of guilt (this is something he wants to hide), it shows that Port still likely holds these same fetishes to this day. That idea is reinforced by the fact that Evar disclosed that Port actively encouraged him along during his shotacon drawing process. Something Port had lied about in his forum posts on the thread pertaining to the document. Not only have we seen that Port is duplicitous when it comes to his true intentions, and cataloged his various depraved interests, we have seen a potential grooming incident with that PM earlier.

You will see that a lot of this proof is almost a decade old. You may ask yourself, is this information even relevant today? Yes. We know this to be so because Port has shown his continued indulgence in the screenshot from 2016, and the screenshot from 2020 with Evar's admission. Fetishes developed in adolescence certainly do not just vanish over time, especially when they go reinforced through dopamine cycles without any therapy, he just became less stupid and better at hiding it as he aged, instead of blindly casting it on the internet. Therefore, the easiest proof to access historically is the oldest. However, we know it is still pertinent today as there is valid empirical as well as deductive evidence to back such a trend up.

Now, why is this still relevant to Brickadia today? Port, despite being quite literally engaged to Evar Smith (a romantic relationship requires similar sexual interests to not break up, almost always, therefore the evidence at the time should have been enough to remove Port from his position), was defended, shielded, and given plausible deniability by the Brickadia team and community. This misconception needs to be shattered.

Additionally, Port's role has been demoted internally for unknown reasons, they still use him for assistance. He still holds a reputation as an appreciated and upheld community member with community authority. If he wished, he could easily access and prey upon any adolescent in Brickadia's discord or beyond. IF Port was demoted internally for his sexual deviance, the opaque nature of the inner workings of Brickadia are still an issue, and nothing has improved from the previous document. A potential pedophile, the literal fiance to the other pedophile removed from power in Brickadia, needs to be called out and ousted from any position.

And to the team... you, as the development team, certainly want to be the one to announce this truth, and not let it once again fall into the hands of the people. It isn't about saving face or not causing a storm anymore. Brickadia is far past the point of clean reputation amongst their developers. This is a serious issue and prudence is absolutely necessary. Show you give a shit. There is nothing acceptable about letting people who are into loli, shotacon, bestiality, incest, self-admitted hebephiles, cub enthusiasts, et cetera police and develop your video game that, in your own team's words, attracts a MAJORITY from other lego games that cater to young children.

Port is a person who should not be allowed to develop, moderate, police, or hold any voice in a lego sandbox game populated with minors, if he admits to enjoying incest, bestiality, shota, and pre-adolescent children. He has completely tried to deceive and mischaracterize his relationship with his own fiance to save face. He needs to be removed from the team entirely, no matter his current internal role. Pedophiles need to have no potential for power or abuse at all.

All sources diligently checked by American Patriots, thank you. ~ Block Gang
