

Sesseur claims to have taken the image himself, however, massive evidence suggests that he wasn't the creator of this image at all. Proof suggests that it stemmed from Japan around 2003-5. (https://docs.google.com/document/d/1NO7kiKf4ARp40rGRDkTgSXCQ2BWU2d-5rSwbP9bxETk/edit?usp=drive\_link)

Here on Sesseur's Newgrounds page, he states that he created the image using a latex mask and a wig, then used Photoshop solely for touching up the smile and eye rings. Image analysis puts it more towards the fact that it was a normal image painted over in a digital program. Shown here is JTK1, the initial edit spread around Japanese internet websites starting from as early as 2005. (<https://web.archive.org/web/20050801055844/http://fileman.n1e.jp/TOP.PHP>)

This would later evolve into JTK2, in which the earliest known appearance of it didn't show up on anything related to Sesseur at all and was likely created by an individual known as Omega Volt, who linked his post to a JTK1 repost.

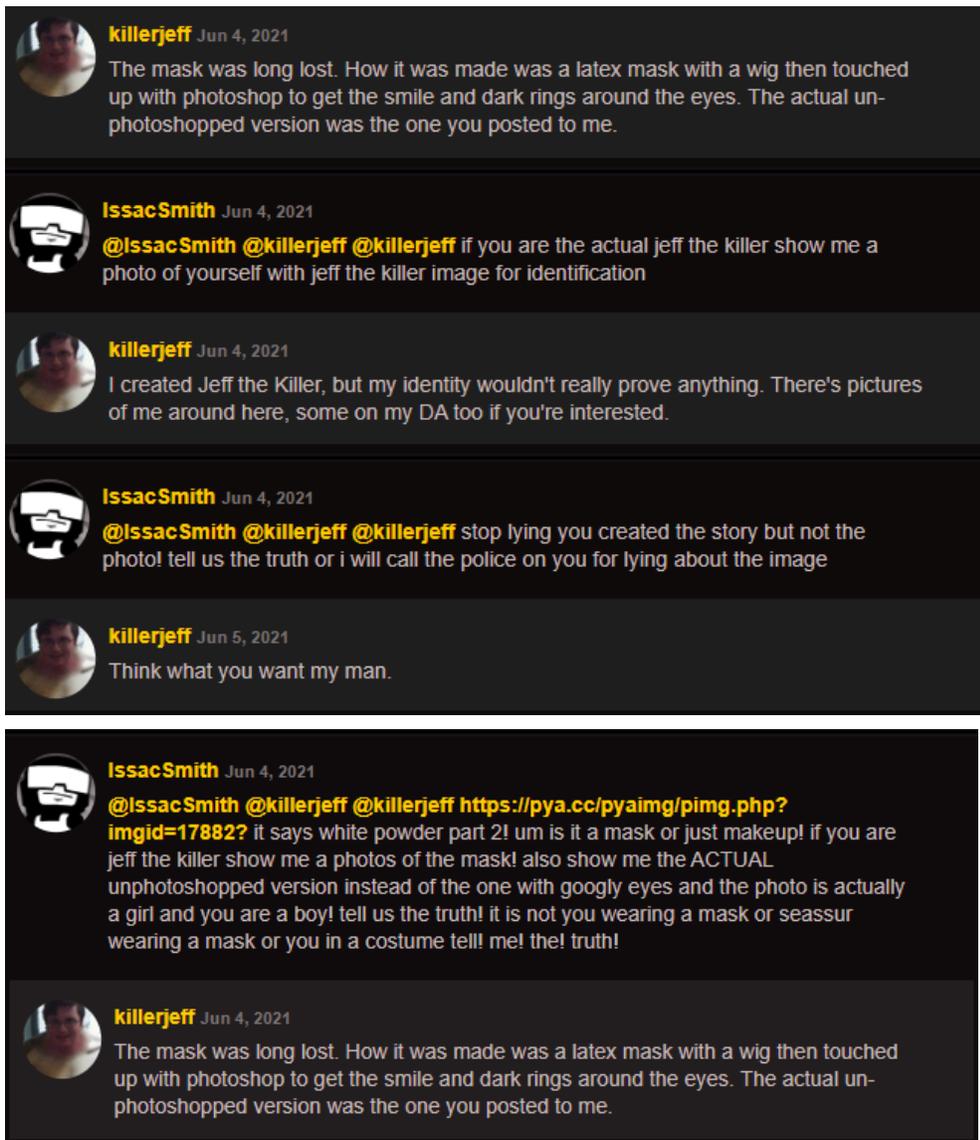

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20210313082424/https://pya.cc/pyaimg/pimg.php?imgid=20716>)

As shown here in another image analysis, you can see the paint strokes done in Photoshop over the already-painted face. Missing from Sesseur's testimony is the drawing done around the face. The earliest known re-post of the JTK image on a Western website was in 2005 after the Japanese posts.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20220301214850/https://www.speedguide.net/forums/showthread.php?187092-Some-Funny-Weird-Pics!>)

In the same Newgrounds conversation, a user posted JTK1 in an attempt to debunk Sesseurs claim of photo authorship, in which he retorts by saying that he found the unedited version, already a lie as it is seen that JTK1 was already photoshopped.

The screenshot shows a series of forum posts on a dark background. Each post includes a circular profile picture, a username, a date, and the text of the message. The conversation involves a user named 'killerjeff' and another named 'IssacSmith'. 'killerjeff' claims to have found an unphotoshopped version of a mask. 'IssacSmith' challenges this claim, asking for proof and threatening to call the police. 'killerjeff' responds by saying 'Think what you want my man.' 'IssacSmith' then provides a link to a website and asks for more evidence. 'killerjeff' repeats his original claim at the end of the screenshot.

The mask was long lost. How it was made was a latex mask with a wig then touched up with photoshop to get the smile and dark rings around the eyes. The actual un-photoshopped version was the one you posted to me.

However, Sesseur has taken this a step further and has copyrighted the “Jeff The Killer” name. In 2016, he gave the trademark to a UK company named “AFG Media” in which they also had the copyright to create visual costumes Sesseur also sold the rights to JTK to Michael McKay from Lakeshore Entertainment approximately around 2014-15 according to these posts.

 ctfdn_official I had a wonderful chat with Michael McKay of Lakeshore Entertainment today, who confirmed he owns all of the rights to the Jeff the Killer character and likeness, which he purchased from the character's creator, Sesseur, several years ago. I'm just curious: how many of you in our audience were aware Sesseur was the original creator, let alone that he had sold the rights, and that one of the producers behind Underworld now producers behind Underworld now personally owned those rights for nearly half a decade? Show of hands!

Sesseur also has said himself that he has done the copyright to a company:

I have a question. Did you copyrighted Jeff the killer?

 Reply

 sesseur Apr 23, 2019
Yes sir. I was advised to do so by one of my managers when this Furbearingbricktrout person was telling people that I had no rights over him and was in threat of the Furbearingbricktrout person taking it for herself, so I had to jump at the opportunity before money that I earned making Jeff went into the pocket of her or another person trying to get copyright.

Hi bro! I actually have a big plan to start a Multiverse series, which is a 72% Pastiche and 28% parody. I actually want to make money out of this due to my high passion for art and film, and also give more awareness to your version of the story (which is actually great).

 sesseur Jun 22, 2020
You'd have to talk to the company backing me for that. Any money made with JTK from a 3rd party might cause legal issues, and so on.

Also because I want to see if there will be a future demand before I start doing an another character, I need money to pay for rent as well, so that's why. I just want your permission first so I don't have to be on a lawsuit with you.

11) Ever since you uploaded the original Jeff the Killer story in 2008, there have been several video games and other creations made based off of Jeff the Killer. Have you gotten money, or anything for that matter as a result?

Not at all, unfortunately. I do, however, now have a company that spots for me and which ever works that are based off of Jeff the Killer do get released they could actually do something about it so I'm not ripped off without any residuals any further by their decision.

12) There is currently an indiegogo page that is raising money to create a Jeff the Killer movie. What do you think of this?

I've seen the kickstarter page, and unfortunately my production team caught wind of the project and are currently looking into it to shut it down, I feel bad about it, but they are looking out for my and of course their best interest.

Although some may view Sesseur's lie about creating the image as harmless, it has enabled him to profit from an image that doesn't belong to him since 2016. This has led to fraudulent deals with "AFG Media" and Michael McKay. The concept of "acid," which is closely associated with Sesseur's character, Jeff Hodek, actually predates his involvement. It stems from a rumor circulating on 2ch between July and November 2005 when JTK1 first emerged, and was later found on 4chan.

In the creepypasta fandom, Jeff The Killer is recognized as both Jeff Hodek, created by Sesseur with a brief premise, and Jeff Woods, whose longer story went viral in 2011 after being posted by GamefuelTV. Despite the shared name, Jeff Hodek and Jeff Woods are completely different characters and stories, much like how Nina The Killer or Jane The Killer only share "The Killer" part of their names. These characters stand as independent original creations.

However, Sesseur or associated has made at least two notable attempts to take over projects NOT related to Jeff Hodek. One instance involved an IndieGogo campaign for a Jeff The Killer fan movie inspired by Jeff Woods, which was successfully taken down by Sesseur's team.

<https://archive.is/wip/liDL9> Inside Sesseur post someone links the Indiegogo link: <https://www.indiegogo.com/projects/jeff-the-killer-the-movie--2#/> (archived version from 9 years ago) <https://archive.is/bQPBT> As you see the project states that is Jeff Woods “Hi everyone. My name is Jeff Woods. You may know me by the name of Jeff the Killer. I’d like to tell you my story.”. This project was unrelated to Jeff Hodek’s character, yet his team successfully took it down.

The second instance involved Sesseur trying to contact English filmmaker Clive Barker, whose project for Jeff never seemed to materialize for unknown reasons.

<https://x.com/JeffRummy/status/597600130469109763?t=-UwOH5a3QZhh--JyOBXmww&s=19>

When Sesseur’s “design” for Liu Roman Hodek is a stolen image from a guy who shares the same name, Roman Hodek, he only included “Liu” (<https://www.hodek.net/>), and Jeff Hodek is a carbon copy of “Ichi The Killer” whom he admits taking “inspiration” from (<https://archive.is/eVdpg>). Examples of Jeff Hodek and Ichi The Killer for comparison.

Sesseur has also changed his version of the story to fit his narrative. Back in 2014, Sesseur claimed that he had made up with Jeff in April 2008.

https://www.newgrounds.com/bbs/topic/1371872#bbspost25177446\_post\_text

Again in 2014, Someone asked on his DA if he made the picture or just the story and he replied about when everything was made: “The picture, name and original backstory on a video back in 2008” <https://archive.is/F5caY>

When new leads of the JTK image were found, he changed his version of the story to say that he made the image back in 2005.

https://www.newgrounds.com/bbs/topic/1491043#bbspost27233323\_post\_text

In one instance (<https://archive.is/lKcRY>) he was caught in 2019 saying that he had posted the image on a Japanese site full of graffiti. He then said that the image resurfaced in an article on ED (Encyclopedia Dramatica), where it’s presumed that Sesseur probably grabbed the image from. He also said that this was when he decided to claim “his own image,” name it, and create a story about it. In this very thread, Sesseur claims that the unphotoshopped version of the image is the one he linked:

<https://i.kinja-img.com/gawker-media/image/upload/s--5bzDNkpB--/18vxahbvpu1cdjpg.jpg>

Which is JTK1. This is false. It has been proven that JTK1 is also photoshopped.

For anyone interested in reading the complete timeline of the image being spotted, it can be found in this Google Sheet:
