SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

“Mailfrawd” is a pseudonymous user on the notorious harassment website Kiwi Farms¹ who has demonstrated a particularly targeted virulence towards Honeycomb.io Field CTO Liz Fong-Jones. Mailfrawd created his Kiwi Farms user account on December 17, 2022, and made his first post that same day, posting to the section of the site dedicated to harassing Ms. Fong-Jones and claiming to have met her in real life. He posted several more times that same day encouraging other Kiwi Farms users to disrupt her career by protesting her inclusion in developer conferences and speaking engagements, using such strong and straightforward language that the other Kiwi Farms users immediately suspected that he was disingenuously seeking to entrap the users of the site into making equally strong statements. However, after he verified his identity and story with one of the moderators of the forum, he was given an official stamp of approval and welcomed to the site with open arms.

Over the past two years, Mailfrawd has continued to focus alarmingly on Ms. Fong-Jones; she is one of his two main topics of discussion on the site. His language towards her has grown increasingly concerning over time, as he has continued to encourage people to visit events she is speaking at with the intent of threatening her and disrupting the event. However, Mailfrawd’s desire to boost his reputation and following among the other users on the site has caused him to share specific details about the nature and extent of his prior relationship with her, to the point where the information he had shared was sufficient to conclusively identify him as:

MAILFRAWD ON LIZ FONG-JONES

Mailfrawd made his first post² to the 800+ page thread dedicated to defaming and harassing Liz Fong-Jones on Kiwi Farms on December 17, 2022, stating:

I’ve met and interacted with this faggot in person on multiple occasions, and [she’s]³ as annoying as this thread reports.
One thing KF has already caught on is that [she] is an extremely public figure, and bringing [her] rape confession⁴ up in front of conference organizers may be the one thing that will push this retard over the line into the 41%⁵. This asshole's entire job is to convince organizers of these events to invite [her] to speak, and if they think [she's] going to draw a bunch of negative attention they'll eventually stop inviting [her].

Keep it up.

When another user encouraged him to share more details, he made another post⁶ a few hours later. This post was deleted by the site admins under suspicions that it was a “false flag” intended to encourage users to post illegal threats, but it is preserved in a quote from a responding user. Amongst other harassing and derogatory language, the post says, “It may be worth trying to reach out to the organizers to express outrage at [her] invitation and indicate you’re unwilling to attend since [her] presence makes you feel unsafe (be sure to use the troon⁷ trigger words as much as possible).” After the Kiwi Farms users expressed skepticism, Mailfrawd contacted the moderators of the forum and apparently provided them with proof of his claims, after which they modified his profile to read “Met Liz Fong-Jones in real life” and “Verified Kiwileak,” an appellation given to those who provide information about the site’s targets.

Mailfrawd's user profile on Kiwi Farms

From this point on, Mailfrawd was given a hero's welcome on Kiwi Farms and encouraged to post as much information about Ms. Fong-Jones as he could.

Mailfrawd's Position Within the Industry

Mailfrawd's posts about his role within the software industry make it clear that his claims to be part of the developer relations and site reliability space are genuine. His critiques of Ms. Fong-Jones' employer, Honeycomb.io, are harsh and contemptuous, but they demonstrate a strong grasp of the material, using terms such as “OTel” (for Open Telemetry)⁸ that are only commonly used by experienced engineers within the space. The detailed nature of his criticism suggests that he has studied Honeycomb's offerings in this space extensively, implying that he may have been employed by a competitor of theirs in the past.⁹ This conclusion is further supported by his claim that he used to work with “a company adjacent to Honeycomb where we were invited to several of the same conferences in some capacity, usually as a presenter or as a vendor rep”¹⁰ and that he collaborated with Ms. Fong-Jones on a short-term basis but was never a coworker of hers, saying “I never had to collaborate with [her] for more than a short amount of time (never worked at the same company, our jobs were just similar but with different companies),”¹¹ and going on to express hope that she will be drummed out of the industry for non-specific “antisocial behavior.”¹²

⁵ The “41%” figure is a reference to the oft-reported claim that 41% of all transgender people die by suicide.

⁷ “Troon” is a derogatory slur for transgender people which is heavily used on Kiwi Farms.

He also describes the extent of their shared experiences at conferences and speaking engagements with substantial specificity, saying that he “encountered [her] in several speaker lounges and dinners”¹³ and that he has “shared a table with [her] while eating and have had a few round table discussions”¹⁴ He further makes it clear that while he was previously employed in this space in the capacity of a speaker and presenter, he is no longer in that role: “I’d love to go back to speaking at conferences, traveling, and walking expo hall floors for a living, but that’s not what I do now”¹⁵ and “[c]onstantly having to build and refine presentations, applying to speak at conferences, travelling, presenting, showing up at a sponsored tech booth and socializing while at technology events is incredibly time consuming and exhausting as hell. I did this for a few years and while it was fun getting paid to literally travel around the world I wouldn’t go back to doing it.”¹⁶

Mailfrawd’s Statements Narrow His Possible Identity Substantially

Mailfrawd’s initial post was sufficiently vague that it was not possible to identify him; Ms. Fong-Jones speaks at a dozen or more conferences every year and has done so for the better part of a decade. However, these further details change the game substantially. He makes it clear that he attended these conferences not just as a participant, but as a speaker and a presenter; that he did so after Ms. Fong-Jones began working at Honeycomb; that he attended multiple conferences with her as a fellow speaker that were large and well-funded enough to include a speaker dinner; and that as of December 2022, he has left this role for one with much less exposure to the public. Because Ms. Fong-Jones joined Honeycomb in February of 2019 and the COVID-19 pandemic forced the cancellation of all such conferences after approximately March of 2020, Mailfrawd must have attended these conferences during this thirteen-month period, as he stated he left the role prior to the resumption of in-person conferences.

When the speaker lists for all the conferences that Ms. Fong-Jones spoke at during this time period which were large enough to host speaker dinners and receptions were analyzed, 39 distinct individuals were found to appear more than once. Of those 39 individuals, 37 of them are still employed in a speaker-presenter role, leaving only two people who could be Mailfrawd. Those two people's social media and job history were then analyzed against Mailfrawd's incidental disclosures on Kiwi Farms. Of these, one person matched none of these details and was subsequently removed from the potential identity list; the other, Kevin Crawley, matched nearly every single statement Mailfrawd made, as detailed below.

MAILFRAWD'S MATCH POINTS WITH KEVIN CRAWLEY

Although Mailfrawd expressed concern about his future within the industry if his feelings about transgender people generally and Ms. Fong-Jones specifically were to become known,¹⁷ he has been quite free with details about his personal life. In his nearly two years and approximately 320 posts on Kiwi Farms, he has revealed that he has an 11-year old son ("My 11yo just asked me to teach him how to shoot..."),¹⁸ that he takes Zepbound/Mounjaro for weight loss,¹⁹ that he has an Adderall prescription,²⁰ that he is an avid cyclist ("As someone who used to bike 20-30 miles daily, with 60-100 mile stints on weekends to stay in shape..."),²¹ that he plays the video game Final Fantasy,²² that he works in Big Tech but not at Google,²³ that he advocates marrying a teacher to facilitate the homeschooling of one's children,²⁴ that he does not care for pornography²⁵ and is interested in the topic of "pornography addiction,"²⁶ and that he is extensively familiar with the

As shown below, every one of these details is also true of Kevin Crawley. Each of them, taken individually, would not be significant enough to confirm his identity; after all, many people have 11-year-old children, take Adderall, play video games, etc. But taken together and layered with the specific details Mailfrawd has shared about the scope of his relationship with Ms. Fong-Jones, they take the comparison beyond coincidence and into near-certainty. Kiwi Farms user Mailfrawd is Kevin Crawley.

Kevin Crawley, Speaker, Presenter, and Collaborator

Kevin Crawley lives in Franklin, TN³², just south of Nashville. He is a staff software engineer at Meta, Inc., in an “acquired not hired” role; he was working at the virtual reality startup Within when it was acquired by Meta in early 2023. In 2019 and early 2020, however, he was a Senior DevOps Advocate at Instana, a monitoring, observability, and site reliability startup which has since been acquired by IBM.³³ Instana is a direct competitor to Honeycomb. Nonetheless, it was not uncommon for Kevin and Ms. Fong-Jones to collaborate on projects and presentations during Kevin’s time at Instana, living out the maxim frequently cited within this space of “different employers, same team.” In fact, they co-presented a workshop together at SRECon Americas in 2019;³⁴ slide 15 of the presentation deck, entitled “Random Personal Nerdy Facts,” even references both Kevin’s dedication to cycling and his enjoyment of the Final Fantasy video game series,³⁵ confirming two of the match points between Mailfrawd and Kevin Crawley.³⁶ The two of them also participated in a workshop together at Velocity Berlin in November 2019, matching Mailfrawd's claim to the same;³⁷ photographs of the event³⁸ clearly show both of them present.^{39 40}

Kevin participated as a speaker or presenter at both Velocity and SRECon Americas 2019,⁴¹ and very likely attended as a vendor representative for his employer Instana, which was a sponsor for at least three others: Kubecon North America 2019,⁴² SRECon Europe 2019,⁴³ and DevOpsDays Minneapolis 2019.⁴⁴ This is clearly enough professional overlap to support the claims Mailfrawd made on Kiwi Farms that he and Ms. Fong-Jones were invited to "several of the same conferences in some capacity" and that he usually attended as a "presenter or as a vendor rep."⁴⁵ And Kevin's speaker profile for DevOpsDays Houston 2019 (which Ms. Fong-Jones did not attend) references his "five-year old son Jonah" and spouse Rachel;⁴⁶ simple arithmetic demonstrates that a child who was five years old in early 2019 would be eleven years old in late 2024, creating yet another match point to Mailfrawd.⁴⁷

Ms. Fong-Jones remembers Kevin and the warm, mutually respectful professional relationship the two enjoyed prior to the pandemic. She even gave him a professional reference which Kevin credited at the time with helping him get a job quickly after he was a casualty of Instana's pandemic layoffs in early 2020.

careless abandon.⁴⁹ However, the progression can be documented across Kevin’s other social media as well, consistent with rather than contradicting his identification as Mailfrawd.

Kevin Crawley’s Other Online Activity

When Kevin and Ms. Fong-Jones collaborated in 2019-2020, he used the email address kcmastrpc@gmail.com. A search for the username “kcmastrpc” identified social media profiles which can be tied to Kevin on three platforms: the discussion platform Reddit, the special-interest hacker and technology discussion site YCombinator, and the user-contributed online encyclopedia Wikipedia. These various social media profiles confirm the match points created by Mailfrawd’s comments on Kiwi Farms and also document Kevin’s slide into bigotry over the past five years.

Kevin Crawley on Reddit

The Reddit account /u/kcmastrpc almost certainly belongs to Kevin Crawley; a post from that account to /r/pelotoncycle⁵⁰ describing an open-source analytics development project the author was undertaking links to a comment on the Github repository ptx2/gymnasticon authored by Github user “kevtainer,”⁵¹ who is identified as Kevin Crawley on the GitHub profile page.⁵² Furthermore, one of /u/kcmastrpc’s comments identifies Instana, Kevin Crawley’s employer at the time, as his employer.⁵³ As a result, is highly unlikely that anyone other than Kevin Crawley operates this Reddit account.

The most significant match point confirmation from Kevin’s Reddit activity is of his Zepbound usage. He posts extensively on the topic,⁵⁴ with some of his posts using Kiwi Farms lingo such as “jannies,” a slang term meaning “moderators” (from “janitors”),⁵⁵ and his dosage and schedule match Mailfrawd’s.⁵⁶ However, this is not the only match point confirmed by Kevin’s Reddit activity; he also confirms his avid cycling habits,⁵⁷ his Final Fantasy gameplay,⁵⁸ his fascination with “pornography addiction,”⁵⁹ and his Adderall prescription.⁶⁰ His Reddit activity also,

My understanding is they've recently enacted a law for those arrested on charges related to being a public nuisance to avoid being charged and prosecuted if they opt-in for treatment and the programs attempting to solve the problem.

So far, very few people have taken the treatment option.

The YCombinator account “kcmastprc” is also operated by Kevin Crawley; a post on March 6, 2019 identified Instana as his employer.⁶⁸ Although his posting on YCombinator is less prolific than on Reddit, it confirms at least one match point with Mailfrowd: a post 7 months ago identified him as having “a job in FAANG,”⁶⁹ confirming the “worked in Big Tech” match point.⁷⁰

Kevin Crawley on Wikipedia

The Wikipedia account “kcmastprc” is operated by Kevin Crawley; a July 16, 2020 COI (conflict of interest) disclosure identified that he was editing articles on Wikipedia on behalf of Kevin’s employer at the time, Containo.us,⁷¹ as part of the job he acquired partially as a result of Ms. Fong-Jones’ assistance.

Wikipedia is a user-edited online encyclopedia in which any article can be edited in any way by any user, including reverting edits previously made by another user. To avoid chaos, disruptive editing, and unreliability in the face of warring factions, Wikipedia editor activities and culture are highly regulated both by written policies and rules and unwritten cultural norms. Once these policies, rules, and norms are taken into account, facts can often be inferred from circumstances that would not otherwise make those facts plain.

In addition to these indirect inferences, the technical structure of the Wikipedia site itself often allows for more direct inferences. For example, there are two paths to discover the existence of a particular change made to a particular article. The first requires the user first to browse to the article page itself, then to click on “View History,” and last to browse through the list of the edits made to the page over time until the particular edit in question is identified. The second path requires the user to have placed the page in question on their “watch list,” which generates an ongoing list of all edits made to that page; the user then needs only to load their watch list and click on the relevant edit. Because the watch list dynamically generates a single central list of all edits that are relevant to a given user, it allows users to become aware of these edits much more quickly. The more quickly a user reacts to a given edit, the more likely it is that the user learned about because the page on which the edit occurred is in their watch list.

On March 28, 2024, Kevin Crawley used his “kcmastprc” Wikipedia account to revert an edit made to Ms. Fong-Jones’s Wikipedia page which had been made only thirteen hours earlier.⁷² Thirteen hours is a very quick response in Wikipedia time; based on the speed of his response, it is highly likely that Kevin learned about this edit via his watchlist rather than by stumbling across the change organically. Thus, Kevin is highly likely to have had Ms. Fong-Jones’ Wikipedia page on his watchlist. However, while most users place pages on their watchlists because they are frequent contributors to the content of that page, either by adding facts to it or by removing incorrect information and otherwise “cleaning up,” the edit represented in this changelog is the only contribution that Kevin Crawley has ever made to Ms. Fong-Jones’s page.

It is very unusual within Wikipedia editor culture for a user to have a page on their watchlist which they never edit; the only typical reason to do so would be out of a detailed and focused interest in the subject and content of the page that the user does not want to advertise. (While the number of users watching a page is public, the identity of those users is not.) The user contributions page for the “kcmastrpc” account shows that Kevin is a prolific and highly experienced Wikipedia editor^{73 74} whose use of the site is highly likely to be in line with these cultural norms; thus, it is more likely than not that he keeps Ms. Fong-Jones’ page on his watchlist without editing it for precisely that reason, that he has an intense interest in Ms. Fong-Jones which he does not wish to publicly disclose.

While these conclusions are inferential, the highly regulated and normative nature of Wikipedia editor culture allows for inferences firm enough for conclusions based on those inferences to be reliable. They are also consistent with Mailfrawd’s statements on Kiwi Farms that no Wikipedia editor who became aware of Ms. Fong-Jones’ page via Kiwi Farms would ever disclose that fact, “as we all know what happens to those who are associated with using this site.”⁷⁵

Rachel Crawley, Middle School Teacher

Finally, Kevin Crawley’s wife Rachel’s LinkedIn page lists her as a teacher at Page Middle School,⁷⁶ but Page Middle School has no teacher by that name.⁷⁷ One possible explanation for this discrepancy is that she is homeschooling her and Kevin’s 11-year-old son Jonah, in conformance with MailFrawd’s stated belief that one should marry a teacher to facilitate homeschooling one’s children.⁷⁸

Mailfrawd Can Only Be Kevin Crawley

Once the exclusion criteria were applied and the pool of candidates for Mailfrawd narrowed to two, any single point of comparison which matched one candidate versus the other could be dispositive. In this case, we have ten matching points of comparison:

- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin have an eleven-year-old son.
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin have worked at a FAANG.
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin take Zepbound for weight loss.

⁷³ <https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Special:Contributions/Kcmastrpc&target=Kcmastrpc&limit=500>

⁷⁴ It is also highly in keeping with Mailfrawd’s stated mode of action in that role: “The only way to be disruptive on Wiki is to just revert edits with semi-good faith objections and become politely obstinate in the discussion, which requires the Wiki activists to actually fight to keep anything of substance in the article.” See FN 28, supra.

⁷⁸ See FN 24, supra.

- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin take Adderall for ADHD.
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin are avid cyclists.
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin are experienced Wikipedia editors.
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin use Kiwi Farms slang like “jannies.”
- Both Mailfrawd and Kevin have a marked antipathy to LGBTQ+ individuals.
- Mailfrawd encourages marriage to a teacher to facilitate the homeschooling of one’s children; Kevin’s teacher wife Rachel no longer works at the middle school where she was once employed, plausibly because she is homeschooling their middle-school-aged child.
- While the Kevin that Ms. Fong-Jones knew was a caring individual whom she, as a transgender woman, felt comfortable referring to a colleague for a job, his progression to the unstable bigot he presents as today is clearly visible in his Reddit history.
- The only other possible candidate fits none of these criteria.

In the absence of any match points with the other candidate, one matching point of comparison with Kevin Crawley would be strongly suggestive; two or three could be dispositive. Ten match points with one candidate and zero match points with the other is conclusive. The Kiwi Farms user known as Mailfrawd can be no other person than Kevin Crawley of Franklin, TN, currently employed as a Staff Software Engineer at Meta, Inc.

MAILFRAWD’S ACTIVITY AND POTENTIAL FOR HARM

Viewing Mailfrawd’s posts on Kiwi Farms in context makes it clear that he intends Ms. Fong-Jones a great deal of physical, emotional, and reputational harm. From his very first day on the site, he encouraged other users to defame and harass Ms. Fong-Jones with the goal of driving her out of her industry and/or to harm herself:

- “[B]ringing [a defamatory lie] up in front of conference organizers may be the one thing that will push this retard over the line into the 41%.”⁷⁹

I've met and interacted with this faggot in person on multiple occasions, and he's as annoying as this thread reports.

One thing KF has already caught on is that he is an extremely public figure, and bringing his rape confession up in front of conference organizers may be the one thing that will push this retard over the line into the 41%. This assholes entire job is to convince organizers of these events to invite him to speak, and if they think he's going to draw a bunch of negative attention they'll eventually stop inviting him.

Keep it up.

Personal story wise, definitely not without outright doxxing myself, but all I have are anecdotal stories around this degenerates behavioral issues. (he is definitely on the spectrum, but everyone here probably knows this).

However, I am deeply familiar with conference speaking so I can probably share some additional details around how we can disrupt this faggots existence. I've witnessed multiple speakers get cancelled once they were invited and some controversy was brought up. It's not rocket science, and tech conferences publish their speaking schedules ahead of time. It may be worth trying to reach out to the organizers to express outrage at his invitation and indicate you're unwilling to attend since his presence makes you feel unsafe (be sure to use the troon trigger words as much as possible). However, the only time I've seen speakers preemptively cancelled was after public outrage. Most of his CFPs will go towards tech conferences covering monitoring, devops, SRE, and "observability".

Some stuff to look out for:

- DevOpsDays
- SRECon
- Kubecon
- Cloud Native Days
- Anything USENIX
- DevOps Enterprise Summit

Looking at his past event roster may also give some hints as to where he'll be invited to speak again (most of them are yearly events).

Elliot advertising Honeycomb's ✨ DYNAMIC ✨ service map. I swear, Honeycomb's usage of "dynamic" is more nauseating than Todd Howard's; at least Todd tells me sweet little lies. Elliot tells nothing but large, vicious deceptions. | Original | Blog post

View attachment 4567353

Hey mailfrawd isn't Honeycomb's stack largely OSS shit that's expensive to maintain in aggregate? I recall Click to expand...

Service maps aren't useful at all, he's right about that. There's nothing compelling or useful about their implementation either, only that it took them 3-4 years longer for them to build it after watching their competitors deliver it before them. Elliot, either post receipts / heatmaps and testimonials about it being used outside of the sales pitch or stfu with the marketing drivel.

Honeycomb uses open source on the client side of the observability stack, this is called Open Telemetry. This consortium was formed a few years ago because historically, APM and monitoring vendors would build these SDKs and libraries themselves and instruct their customers to install them. Eventually, some vendors figured out how to "auto-instrument" certain languages and frameworks because of the byte loaders that allowed runtime monkey patching (not all languages expose this capability, Java is one that does -- statically compiled languages like Rust or Go aren't as "accessible"). At first, OTel was a mess, incomplete implementations, buggy updates, literally causing apps to crash (this happens with commercial tools too, but with less frequency). The ecosystem has improved since and there are now OSS tools that do the auto instrumentation too!

In any case, the rise of Open Source server side tools to process telemetry produced by applications have gained popularity and market share. Grafana, Kibana, Jaeger, etc have all been around for a while, but there wasn't a common "framework" to emit the data these tools need to collect to be useful (OTel enters the room). Elliot is referring to the costs of running those server side tools at scale. ELK is notoriously difficult to run at scale, and if you want to handle the gobs of telemetry that modern apps produce in production, you'll need something like Kafka to handle processing and a massively distributed database to handle storage. Those are really difficult to own/manage, and that's precisely why smaller orgs (less than thousands) will often just pay vendors like Splunk or Datadog to handle it for them.

But the other thing I wanted to point out is that the guy who claimed to work with Fong Jones at Google said that Fong Jones universally made people uncomfortable.

Maybe he can get some online support from other trannies and terrified champagne socialists fearing ostracism from the woke in crowd, but it sounds like people want to avoid him and he is socially crippled.

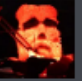

I've had the unfortunate displeasure of working with a company adjacent to Honeycomb where we were invited to several of the same conferences in some capacity, usually as a presenter or as a vendor rep.

He is a protected class and knows it, as such he will not hesitate to make passive aggressive and divisive commentary any chance he gets. I encountered him in several speaker lounges and dinners where I would try my best to avoid having to interact with him because as another KFer pointed out, he makes normies uncomfortable. Sex pests and socially awkward will naturally surround him, which just results in a gaggle of faggots, further exacerbating his victim mentality.

I've shared a table with him while eating and have had a few round table discussions -- he's relatively mild mannered but he does possess that annoying passive aggressive vibe that most tech workers exude (I'm probably included in that regard, so whatever). He is annoying though, and while he never openly discussed his weird sexual fetishes and behaviors around me in public I'm almost certain that if the topic came up he would have gleefully explored that topic area (at which point I would have grabbed my bag and left his vicinity). Like most ancaps, his activism only really rears its ugly head when he's behind a keyboard or surrounded by sicophants. As much as he'd like to "smash capitalism" among his oppressive patriarchal peers, deep down he knows he's just another techbro who got rich using the same system he proclaims to be against. Elliot may just not have the free time he used to have now with the pandemic being over. Constantly having to build and refine presentations, applying to speak at conferences, travelling, presenting, showing up at a sponsored tech booth and socializing while at technology events is incredibly time consuming and exhausting as hell. I did this for a few years and while it was fun getting paid to literally travel around the world I wouldn't go back to doing it. On top of being an incredibly time-consuming job as I mentioned above, hanging out with a bunch of woke tranny loving faggots is something I loathe and that's what tech conferences are all about now days.

I'm generalizing here, because neurological effects of most mood altering substances are incredibly complex and dynamic. However, there are serious implications around the long-term effects of stimulant use in both children and adults and this article touches on how this is an area that lacks research.

That being said, I have a Rx for Adderall because I'm not necessarily opposed to their use, at least in adults who are able to better understand the effects and potential downsides. (and who know when to take breaks).
