Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing as follow up to my previous letter that I have still not received a response to.

The situation has only become more desperate since my last letter, and I am nearly past the point where I am prepared to keep asking you nicely. If you really cared about the fans, you would be cancelling the fake, awful, disgusting thing that you are calling Episode IX and would be putting my script into production instead, along with declaring all of the Disney Star Wars films non-canon. I am very frustrated that my last letter and my script were not even acknowledged.

However, I am aware that providing you with only one script was probably not the way to go about it. I have therefore worked tirelessly for the last six months to write two further scripts for Episode VIII and Episode IX. Now there is no excuse for continuing to ignore me and my work. I have a complete vision for this trilogy and it is far, far better than whatever Jar Jar Abrahms and Chris Turdio are planning to crap out.

I also enclose early concept posters for the films in the hopes that this will save the design team some trouble. I would also like to propose that I should be cast as Jace Solo in the films. You can see from the posters what this would look like. I think you still have my audition tape for the role of Han Solo on style, so please have a look at that to confirm that I am up to the task of playing this character.

I am sure that when Mr Lucas reads my scripts, he will agree that this is always the way things were meant to be. Please pass these scripts to him with the utmost urgency. I will keep writing to you until I get a positive answer.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely
