Peptides Memoirs in Space Station 14

Written by Peptide, Credentials and preface:

- Previous top 10 contributor to Wizden, starting in February 2021, One of the first mappers on SS14 besides PJB (Saltern) and Timrod (Packed). I created the first medium to high pop map NSS Pillar as well as Split Station, wrote the mapping wiki and maintained it till 2024 and helped countless mappers get into SS14 who are responsible for some of the maps you love now.
- Previous Game Admin from around December 2021 till around 2023 when I stepped down, again one of the most active admins during the 2022 period alongside Pancake and a few others who we taught, outlasting quite a few of those which will be touched on later.
- Owner / Founder of Singularity Network, Previously just Nuclear 14. I started Nuclear-14 in July 2022 because I was fed up with how disjointed it was contributing to Wizden. Having some maintainers impose their gameplay design and bias and at other times leave it as a free for all so my PRs would get countered the next week. I raised my issues with multiple people but change started to happen too little too late. Despite the discord for Nuclear14 / SiN starting in July 2022 we didn't manage to launch the alpha for Nuclear14 until August 2023 due to personal commitments and lack of contributors.
- For further context, I never intended to start a community in SS14. I ran communities on minecraft and more on Gmod successfully from around 2009 to around 2015 from DarkRP and TTT to openaura / clockwork / nutscript with the latter being a minor contributor. I left that all behind due to life commitments and just wanted to contribute and make a difference in SS14. I actually stumbled across RE:SS3D first then quickly realised the 3D Spess game wasn't the best format and then quickly discovered SS14 so started piecemeal contributing here while working away from home.

At the time of writing it's now the end of January 2025, I was banned from Wizden discord in November / December 2024 for being outspoken about the handling of things and for asking difficult questions, or just because PJB now hates me, more on that later. It will likely be February 2025 by the time this comes out.

I will lay out everything as logically and as verbatim as possible. I honestly don't have sides in this and historically there has only been one person in this project I did not get along with, and they got removed after I stopped contributing, only after they had driven many contributors away from the project. To lay my cards on the table, the only other person I now dislike is PJB, for how they've acted throughout this process and how they seem to have made up their mind of me and will do everything they can to not see things for how they might be.

I am not your typical internet dweller or "game developer". I'm a late 20s British guy who works in Engineering and Construction. I'm passionate about tech, I enjoy gaming and I'm also passionate about inspiring students to get into STEM careers which is what I spend a lot of time doing when I'm not working or raising my young family. I've never frequented 4chan, I played SS14 on paradise station for a few years, years ago and I barely even frequent reddit anymore because life is too short to be terminally online. It's very likely I have ADHD but I don't let things like that define me and I definitely don't have autism. Tl:Dr, looking at me you wouldn't think I run gaming communities, like roleplaying or do amateur game development.

And a final note before I move onto the next section. I never wanted things to go the way they have. Dividing the community isn't good for anyone and for the longest time I actually wanted to be a maintainer / PM for Wizden to help them steer the ship in the right direction, but that never came to be. I have zero allegiance to anyone and to expand on me not being terminally online, I barely have the bandwidth to keep up with my own discord server, nevermind two or three or more. I check the EE council or other places when I get a ping or when I need help with something or to complain about something. These are barely social spaces for me and I have been openly critical of the way Wizden handles things for awhile now, as I think was my right as a senior contributor who had felt neglected or ignored more than once.

I have never harassed or condoned the harassment of anyone and the screenshots that I have seen that have me in them are either coincidental that I was having a conversation at the same time as someone else, me having a jibe at Wizden the organisation for how they have handled something or reacted which has impacted me, or commenting again on something that has directly impacted me by a specific person. This is not harassment, if you can't take legitimate criticism or actually discuss disagreements then the internet is not the place for you. Hiding behind your powers when someone disagrees with you or your friends is not the way to go, have an open conversation and understand each other.

And a final, final note, I was never involved with Nyanotrasen / Nyano. I was actually staff at Wizden at the time and was fully on Wizdens side. I'll cover all this drama in detail later but this misinformation that I was involved in, comes from people who I don't even know and never saw active during my time at Wizden?

Timeline of Events

Note: Some of the dates and information might be fuzzy since I got banned and lost access to some channels in Wizden. I will try to cross reference and check info where possible. Dates / Events in light blue are things I was witness to but probably not involved in.

- February 2021 - Start contributing to SS14. I do a few PRs learning yaml up until April and then I take a break till December due to having a baby.

- December 2021 - I start contributing again and quickly hit the 100 hour playtime requirement to apply for admin. I become admin in December and then all of my playtime past 100 hours is admining for Wizden which is over 400 hours. I'd usually admin while contributing in the background. A lot of my contribution to this date was fixing things and adding content that was still missing. At this time in SS14 we had Saltern and maybe Packed and barely any content or prototypes.

- February 2022 - NSS Pillar V1 comes out. The first mid to large pop map. Lots more fixes, new roles added to the game, started maintaining packed station too.

- April 22 - Split Station comes out, another large pop map met with mixed feelings, the entire idea was to do something radical and for testing of grid splitting as a feature.

- April 22 - Nyanotrasen (Nyano) is formed by Rane. Daemon is the host. I have zero involvement as I believe forking at this early stage to be a waste of time and believe people should be contributing to Wizden to progress it faster. I have zero interaction with Nyanotrasen and have only spoken to Rane and Daemon through contributor chats on Wizden and Daemon was staff on Wizden for a period.

- June 22 - I raise it with PJB in DMs the need for a map maintainer or a PM solely responsible for Yaml and content direction. This is ignored. They later appoint Emisse as the map maintainer despite saying we don't need one and have too many maps? Emisse is great but I have always felt a bit scorned that I wrote the mapping guide and helped so many people get into mapping but it seems Emisse was favorited, power to them, but I hope it wasn't favouritism by the project team.

- July 22 - I start Nuclear14 (later to become singularity network) as mentioned because I'm fed up of the PR back and forth and want my own creative control to merge things and enact my vision of gameplay. This is more or less a placeholder and not much work actually gets done on it until later.

- August 22 - Seija, a Wizden admin, is removed from staff. We are given very little info about this but we later learn from leaks they are accused of pedo related stuff. This is one of the catalysts for all drama that ensued after to this day.

- November 22 - Todd Howard, another Wizden game admin is removed from Wizden and banned. Seemingly for being volatile towards Wizden staff. At this time they are

- April 23 - Related to the November incident, in now deleted DMs with Freeman which was a Wizden PM at the time, I ask if there is any issues with having Todd Howard on our staff because I'd rather be in the clear and not be dehubbed for having a blacklisted person on staff. They say they will raise it internally and I hear nothing back. Go to November 23 for why this is relevant and August 24.

- April 23 - I continue contributing regularly up until this point.
- April 23 - I message PJB for the second time, explaining that I'm concerned with how the project is being ran and certain people who are being promoted and the lack of community engagement or communication around the promotions. I ask for some transparency on what the project manager (PM) role actually does and express I don't think Moony should be in that position after having driven many contributors away from the project and being a terrible communicator (Add to the fact they were underage when they were on staff and seemingly were kept on because they were a competent coder? Or other reasons? As of writing they were removed from the project?) This message to PJB goes ignored.

- April 23 - Nyano is dehubbed at some point after surpassing 1000 discord members and being the second most popular English server behind Wizden. Details here and here from wizden. There's enough stuff in there but from my perspective a lot of the "harassment" (In quotations because I was not involved so I'm just taking peoples word for this, some of it obviously is but let's mention the what first) was in retaliation to Seija being removed from staff and the supposed hypocrisy around that involving Smugleaf. I have personally never said a bad word against smugleaf and have only had good dealings with them, talking about RSIedit and Colonial Marines etc and generally through contributing. This is not my drama to discuss, this is my observation from the outside looking in knowing what I know about Seija getting kicked off staff and ultimately quitting the game hard because of the torment they got over it, whether right or wrong again I don't know the full picture so I won't comment.

- August 23 - Nuclear 14 Alpha which is a wave defence mode finally releases.

- November 23 - I receive a DM from MetalGearSloth (MGS) regarding Todd Howard, an ex Wizden game admin and at the time our discord admin lead, telling me why he was removed from staff. This came about because someone realised I hadn't actually been told and it seemed to slip through the net. As far as I could tell this was all just assumptions again with no evidence and was related to Seija which again wasn't exactly communicated effectively. MGS left it at "up to you what you want to do". Due to lack of any actual evidence and just the odd message from a Wizden PM I ignored it as I had a good reason to. I asked for clarification again in August 24 and was told the same thing with no evidence. Todd was later removed from staff in October 24 for an unrelated reason (volatility towards other staff).

- March 24 - I have a few closed PRs here at which point I stop contributing because of the sheer friction of it.

- April 24 - I update the mapping wiki since it's been largely untouched with new features in its entire time existing apart from my update. I still have an open draft to this day which was also opened in April to further improve it, but since I've gave so much to the project and received little recognition and quite the opposite, I won't be contributing further without proper recognition.

- July 24 - I message PJB for the third time ever in DMs reporting a Russian fork for violating our licensing and making changes which were not public on the Github. They tell me how to get evidence and so I go and get evidence. They then speak to the server and they supposedly comply which is great. No issues with this whatsoever. In other public channels I discuss license violations (Admin / host / community bus I can't remember) and suggest there should be a mechanical way of enforcing licensing because me having to police it is a ridiculous waste of time. The Russian fork goes back to breaking the license again pretty quick but I can't be bothered to keep chasing it up. They eventually shut the server anyway.

- 22 October 24 - A number of staff realise they have been banned from RMC and their discord. I notice I have been banned too. I reach out to Whisper but get ignored. I reach out to DrSmugLeaf and get ignored, again despite talking periodically with them between April 23 and July 24 on things like contributing and RSI Editor. If there was legitimately an issue then isn't it best to talk about them first or at least make the person aware rather than using enforcement action from your friends (more on that next).

- 01 November 24 - Singularity Network receives its first strike. At the time I had no idea what was going on and the evidence was non-existent. I assume it's because some people in our community started being vocal about being banned from RMC and or trashing Wizden which was against our rules. I discuss it with PJB in DMs to be given no real answers.I was stuck in traffic on my way to work when I read this and was actually taken aback by receiving it and the wording in the message being horrid. Again from all previous conversations with PJB and others I had no idea this was coming. Despite feeling this way I deliberately did not share the screenshots with anyone except our maintainer chat because I knew it would cause even more uproar and trashing. Because of deteriorating relations later on I share this with the staff and some key contributors as they're asking more questions about why we got a strike, and this does cause a lot of emotion towards PJB / Wizden with some people but again this is not made public at this time. I later saw comments about betraying PJBs trust by releasing that DM and to that I have to say A) It was extremely unprofessional and not warranted so people need to see that for themselves to believe it. B) This was an official warning from the project and as such should not be treated as private information. If they want to sprinkle extra abuse into that message that's on them.

- 09 November 24 - I reach out to PJB because of a message they put in the Wizden maintainer chat (see below). I reach out, see below).

- 10 November 24 - There's a mass staff walk out at Wizden by head admins and game staff over the way things are being ran and other reasons. As ex staff I actually still have access to the staff-off-topic channel that this was all first discussed in. I spend a few hours offering constructive comments and trying to get to the bottom of what the actual roles and responsibilities of PMs are, as I've asked many times. I was finalised on writing a massive message on how nobody is to blame and how to find a way forward (I've worked in hundred million pound construction projects for years, I know a thing or two about effective project management), then I was removed by PJB because apparently ex staff are now no longer welcome in the ex staff chat, another disregard for my time and effort in their community. See below, I again open up and offer to help but am met with "be glad I didn't deem it necessary to ban you from the Discord entirely".
I again ask for evidence and am met with more asshole comments until we finally get to an actual reason which is "Having ODJ on staff", which is in no way related to the strike we received? So we're getting a strike for having ODJ on as a mapping contributor for historic issues they have with him. I again end the string of messages with offers of support and suggestions to improve their community and am told that any apologies and such are not aimed at us.

- 16 December 24 - I received a message from PJB saying to get VMSolidus (VM) to contact them otherwise our servers will be dehubbed. I don't speak for VM and I fail to see how this is a dehubbable offence, without strikes or what rules it breaks? Again misusing power to get what they want from people. I'm told that by being in their discord server that I'm complicit and endorsing their actions. (again, I only go there when I need technical support or the odd time I'm pinged for an opinion. It's also possible for more than one conversation to be going on at once in discord and to not be involved in the others). I again get met with the ultimatum and respond by asking what compensation I get for the torment they have caused me because they fail to seek advice or take it.

At this point I have no reason to believe they will stick to their word and won't just dehub us all anyway at a later date, given we've had strikes and now this over nothing, and despite having no allegiance to Einstein Engines (EE), I would rather get dehubbed for literally not breaking the rules to show the types of people who are running the hub, than step down from an organisation I really don't care about being in. Ultimately this will hurt my community's growth which is negligent, but I think it's something worth standing for. Dehubbing ensues, doesn't seem to affect our numbers too much but will affect our growth. We make our own hub and start making joking names about what to name our new launcher.

At this point I'm very passionate about the damage PJB is doing to the project, but I opt to let it go to focus on making something better from this dumpster fire of a project that I've spent years of my life contributing to. Over the past few months there's been two or three occasions that have bothered me to my core and made me wish I never found this game and tried so hard to make it better or spent countless hundreds of hours contributing to it, and it was all entirely avoidable. That was until now in late January 2025 where I see more misinformation being spread about me from people who have no idea or should know better but choose not to question things. So I felt I needed to set them straight.

Below will be all the evidence to go along with the timeline as well as specific instances of misinformation that I have rebuttals for.
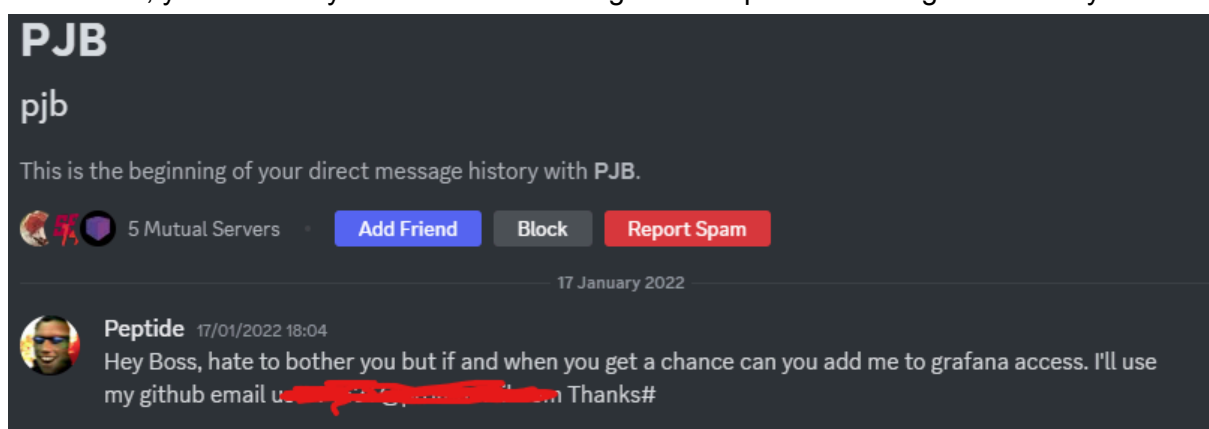

Evidence

All evidence will be denoted Figure E(x). Since google docs is terrible for image citation / labelling I'll also denote things like DMs differently sometimes for my sanity e.g. Figure E-name-1, starting with PJB since it's the most commonly cited DMs.

Where possible I will omit or redact messages from the other party that may be sensitive or that they might not want shown, but I'm fully open to releasing them all as I've been fully professional and cordial in all correspondence.
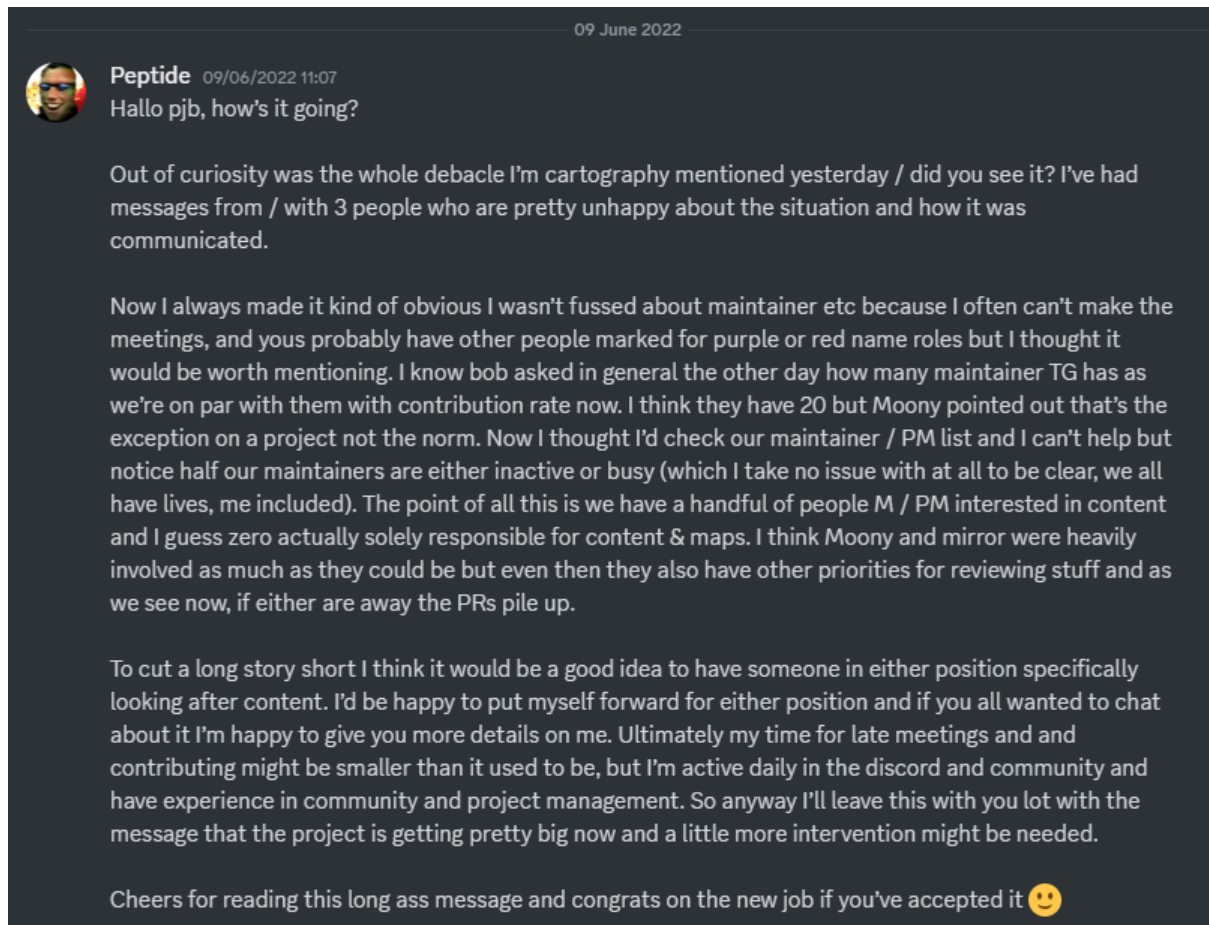

Figure E-PJB-1

Oh discord, you didn't say the start of a budding friendship or something else cheesy.

My first ever message directly to PJB in 2022 asking for Grafana access for logging reasons or something. They give me grafana access, I say thanks then we have no more DM communication till the next evidence.

Figure E-PJB-2

> Peptide 09/06/2022 11:07
> Hallo pjb, how's it going?
>
> Out of curiosity was the whole debacle I'm cartography mentioned yesterday / did you see it? I've had messages from / with 3 people who are pretty unhappy about the situation and how it was communicated.
>
> Now I always made it kind of obvious I wasn't fussed about maintainer etc because I often can't make the meetings, and yous probably have other people marked for purple or red name roles but I thought it would be worth mentioning. I know bob asked in general the other day how many maintainer TG has as we're on par with them with contribution rate now. I think they have 20 but Moony pointed out that's the exception on a project not the norm. Now I thought I'd check our maintainer / PM list and I can't help but notice half our maintainers are either inactive or busy (which I take no issue with at all to be clear, we all have lives, me included). The point of all this is we have a handful of people M / PM interested in content and I guess zero actually solely responsible for content & maps. I think Moony and mirror were heavily involved as much as they could be but even then they also have other priorities for reviewing stuff and as we see now, if either are away the PRs pile up.
>
> To cut a long story short I think it would be a good idea to have someone in either position specifically looking after content. I'd be happy to put myself forward for either position and if you all wanted to chat about it I'm happy to give you more details on me. Ultimately my time for late meetings and and contributing might be smaller than it used to be, but I'm active daily in the discord and community and have experience in community and project management. So anyway I'll leave this with you lot with the message that the project is getting pretty big now and a little more intervention might be needed.
>
> Cheers for reading this long ass message and congrats on the new job if you've accepted it 🙂

This message was in relation to a lot of uproar in the cartography channel about the way things were being handled by the project and its representative maintainers.

This is my first time making it plainly clear I'd be interested in helping the project out to a higher degree either as a maintainer for content and maps (yaml and mapping) or as a project manager to help coordinate and communicate. At this point I've likely written the mapping wiki and guided many new mappers as well as probably being in the top 10 contributors at this point for lines of code (due to mapping) as well as volume of PRs doing yaml and sprite porting.

We chat for an hour and I mention all the maps currently in production and some of the issues we have as mappers and ultimately it gets shrugged off as we have too many maps. Not long after this Emisse is appointed as the Mapping Maintainer despite me getting told its not something they want, fine, things change. This chat ends with my message here:

> Peptide 09/06/2022 12:21
> Anyhow I think we're on the same page so I'll leave this for the badmins to figure out 😛 thanks again for your time, I know I type a lot heh

Figure E-PJB-3

My next direct message to PJB is almost a year later. This is around the time of the Nyano dehubbing.

Peptide 08/04/2023 10:22

Hey PJB, long time no speaks, hope you're well 🙂 sadly I come with bad news as I'm a little concerned about how wizden have been recently, and I'll not beat about the bush, promoting Moony to Project Manager doesn't seem like the best idea.

I should probably make a doc or something but there's been at least 4 PM promotions recently with zero community engagement on it (you run the ship how you want, but at this size you'd expect to introduce them to the community, one has been with us like 6 months and Moony is a whole other kettle of fish, having driven many people away from the project and generally not being good at communication. The others are respectable choices but just thought it would have been nice to inform the community of their appointments and their experience or something.

I could go on, I know I'm not the most active anymore due to time constraint and generally being burnt out having to deal with Moony all the time when most other maints were on break, but some transparency on the role might be nice since as far as I can tell, moony is the only one actively involved in downstream too.

Thanks for reading my mini wall of text, I want to continue contributing to the community and the game but from the outside looking in it seems wizden is really turning into an echo chamber and needs some diversity, and putting these PMs to work communicating more (and not in a corporate way). Thanks as always 🙏

Not redacting this as I stand by it. I'd have to rack my brain on who was driven away from the project by Moony being terrible at communicating with contributors and very abrasive, but they reminded me of working with Swept in the early days of SS14.

I've since cleared out my DMs but I had a conversation with an old long-time SS14 PM who has since moved on and they also did not agree with this decision and it was hard to find many people who did. It seemed like a clear line of favouritism and really blurred the purpose of having maintainers and project managers separate. Moony was a good coder, I won't deny that so worthy of the maintainer role, but representing your project seemed like a big red flag.

Add to that that Moony was appointed to the staff team while underage which was against the Wizden rules, and they were more than open about this in the staff chat at the time when I was a game admin with them.

My other general concerns are communication. When bringing on lots of new project managers the community and wider team want to know the appointments are sound with sound reasoning and experience (if applicable). It's super jarring taking a break or just coming onto discord and seeing lots of new colourful names of people who now have a big influence on the project and not knowing who they are.

Figure E-PJB-4
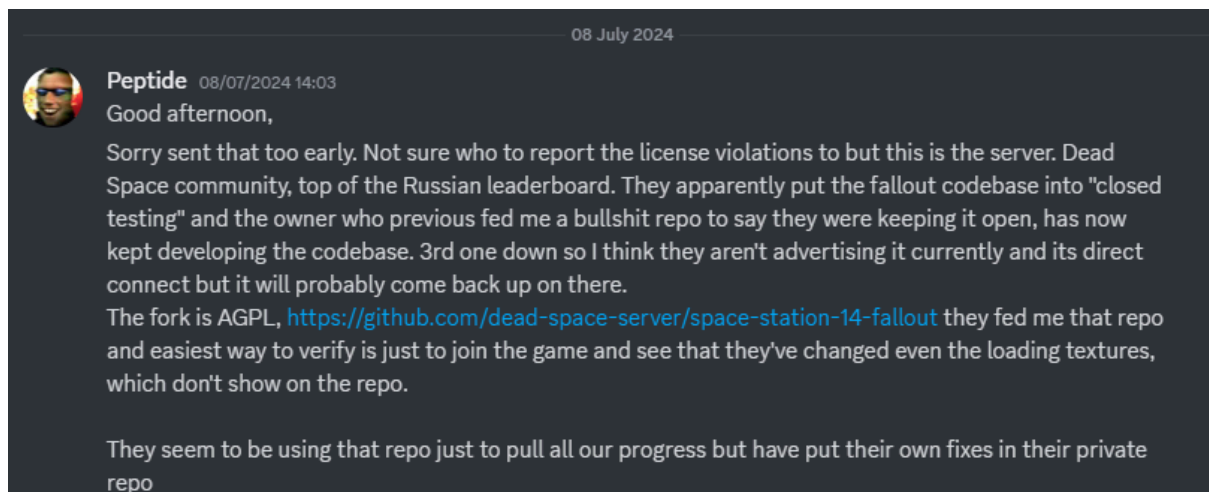

Again another year plus gap between correspondence after that last message went unanswered. This time I raise an AGPL violation for our codebase with PJB. We chatted briefly on the 8th about it briefly on how to prove it. I return on the 23rd of July with evidence and PJB sorts it out with them and says they're considering striking them for breaking the license in the first place.

Not long after the codebase goes back to violating it again and I try to resolve it with the hosts again as I did the first time but ultimately they close the server. I lost interest in bringing this to PJB as I had already made my stance clear at this point in other public places that I don't think I should have to keep an eye on the hub to detect every license violation. Which you'll see used against me in R3 and further which is a misunderstanding on PJBs part.

Figure E-PJB-5

Here is where the hub strike occurs, again the first message since last communications.

01 November 2024

PJB 01/11/2024 03:00
Hi,

This is your formal notice that you have received a strike against Singularity Network.

Please let me know if you have any questions 🙂

On a personal note, I hope you and everybody else you regularly interact with in your pathetic community goes and fucks themselves with a rake 10 times over so I never have to see you again.

And no, don't try to play dumb, we both know you're a pathetic piece of shit.

Peptide 01/11/2024 09:35
How lovely, the link doesn't work and it would be nice if you lot actually communicated with us so we can remove people who are problematic, which we have been doing quite swiftly lately when they don't abide by our rules, no matter what "rank" they are. But of course communication isn't your strong points and everytime I try to message someone to get answers we get nothing back. But you do you

PJB 01/11/2024 09:35
https://forum.spacestation14.com/t/2024-11-01-strike-against-singularity-network-harassment/13805/2 fixed link

> Space Station 14 Forum
> [2024/11/01] Strike against Singularity Network - Harassment
> This topic was automatically closed after 1 minute. New replies are no longer allowed.

Peptide 01/11/2024 09:37
Excellent, what a waste of time clicking the link for one paragraph of bullshit. We have literally cracked down lately on people shittalking other communities and removed people for such too. If you'd like evidence I can provide it but if this is how you people react when I try to actually sort things out then I won't bother the effort

Peptide 01/11/2024 09:47
So if any of your puppets want to actually check through our announcements litertally the day before we told the community to knock it off. But if you want to have a "personal note" about every fucking thing that goes on in this community then so be it. It's a lovely message to wake up to after a few days on holiday and just resonates about how some of your previous staff treat contributors. And you wonder why people leave or wish they never found this project in the first place. And I guess if I find a single mesage in any other community, including your own or RMC shit talking us then you get a strike too?

PJB 01/11/2024 09:49
> And I guess if I find a single mesage in any other community, including your own or RMC shit talking us then you get a strike too?

If you can give us a systematic amount of evidence that any one community has acted towards yours in a way that you do not want, and it is clear that it is systematic and malicious in nature, and for the added cherry on top was even perpetrated by the big man up top himself, then yes

Anyways if you did in fact tell your community to "knock it off" then that's good to hear. I hope to not have to communicate with you again so that the strike can naturally expire in a year. That's why there's 3 strikes after all 🙂
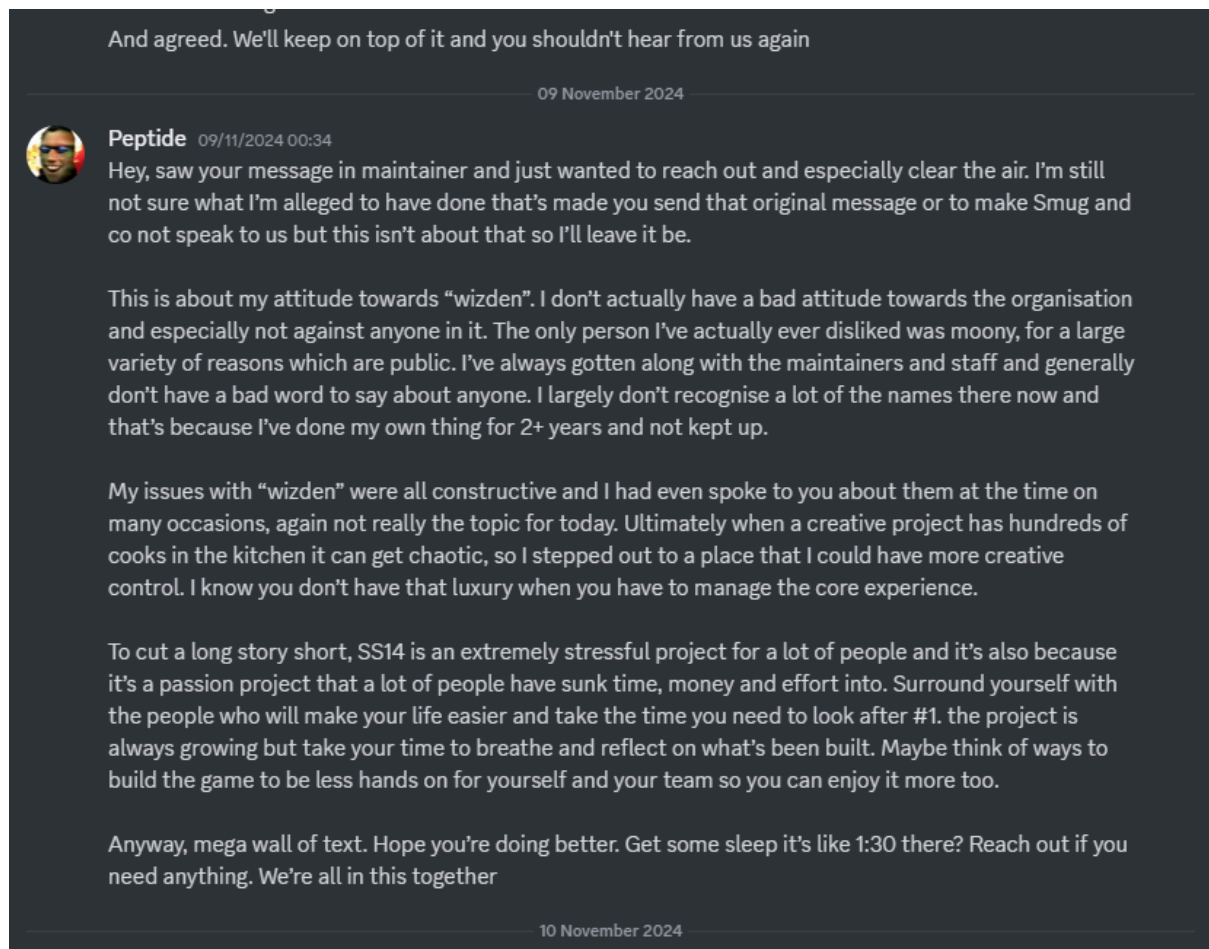

Peptide 01/11/2024 09:53

Peptide 01/11/2024 09:53
Well that sounds like an accusation now so I'd like the evidence. Because at every point in my time in this community I've spoke about cooperation and openness. Yes at times I've got pissed off about how things have been ran but that's because I've had a stake in this for years, and the final straw meant I just went and did my own thing, and I try not to get involved in anything unless it harms my community.

I don't have time to be checking in on everyone else when I barely get a day a week as it is to focus on my own community. It was barely a few months ago we had to explicitly add to our rules "No Drama". Only yesterday we reminded people of that, we've timed out staff and removed staff. Not a single thing points towards us being malicious

And agreed. We'll keep on top of it and you shouldn't hear from us again

This is the full communication for that day, as stated elsewhere I received this totally out of the blue and read it while driving to work. At this point do we need to point out the systematic slandering of myself and my community instigated by a small group and parroted by the many. I'd like to ask any of these people so far if any of them have an actual instance where they've interacted with me and got the impression I'm anything I've been accused of? Including all of the old Wizden maintainers and admins I worked with.

Figure E-PJB-6

And agreed. We'll keep on top of it and you shouldn't hear from us again

09 November 2024

Peptide 09/11/2024 00:34
Hey, saw your message in maintainer and just wanted to reach out and especially clear the air. I'm still not sure what I'm alleged to have done that's made you send that original message or to make Smug and co not speak to us but this isn't about that so I'll leave it be.

This is about my attitude towards "wizden". I don't actually have a bad attitude towards the organisation and especially not against anyone in it. The only person I've actually ever disliked was moony, for a large variety of reasons which are public. I've always gotten along with the maintainers and staff and generally don't have a bad word to say about anyone. I largely don't recognise a lot of the names there now and that's because I've done my own thing for 2+ years and not kept up.

My issues with "wizden" were all constructive and I had even spoke to you about them at the time on many occasions, again not really the topic for today. Ultimately when a creative project has hundreds of cooks in the kitchen it can get chaotic, so I stepped out to a place that I could have more creative control. I know you don't have that luxury when you have to manage the core experience.

To cut a long story short, SS14 is an extremely stressful project for a lot of people and it's also because it's a passion project that a lot of people have sunk time, money and effort into. Surround yourself with the people who will make your life easier and take the time you need to look after #1. the project is always growing but take your time to breathe and reflect on what's been built. Maybe think of ways to build the game to be less hands on for yourself and your team so you can enjoy it more too.

Anyway, mega wall of text. Hope you're doing better. Get some sleep it's like 1:30 there? Reach out if you need anything. We're all in this together

10 November 2024

For continuity, this is the next message sent with the previous and next messages / dates visible. As you'll notice no messages have been deleted or edited in this chat.

This was my message reaching out to clarify that I don't actually have an issue with Wizden, explaining why I went to do my own thing and ultimately reaching out to tell them I understand how they're feeling and offering some self help advice. I'm really a terrible guy I know.

Figure E-PJB-7
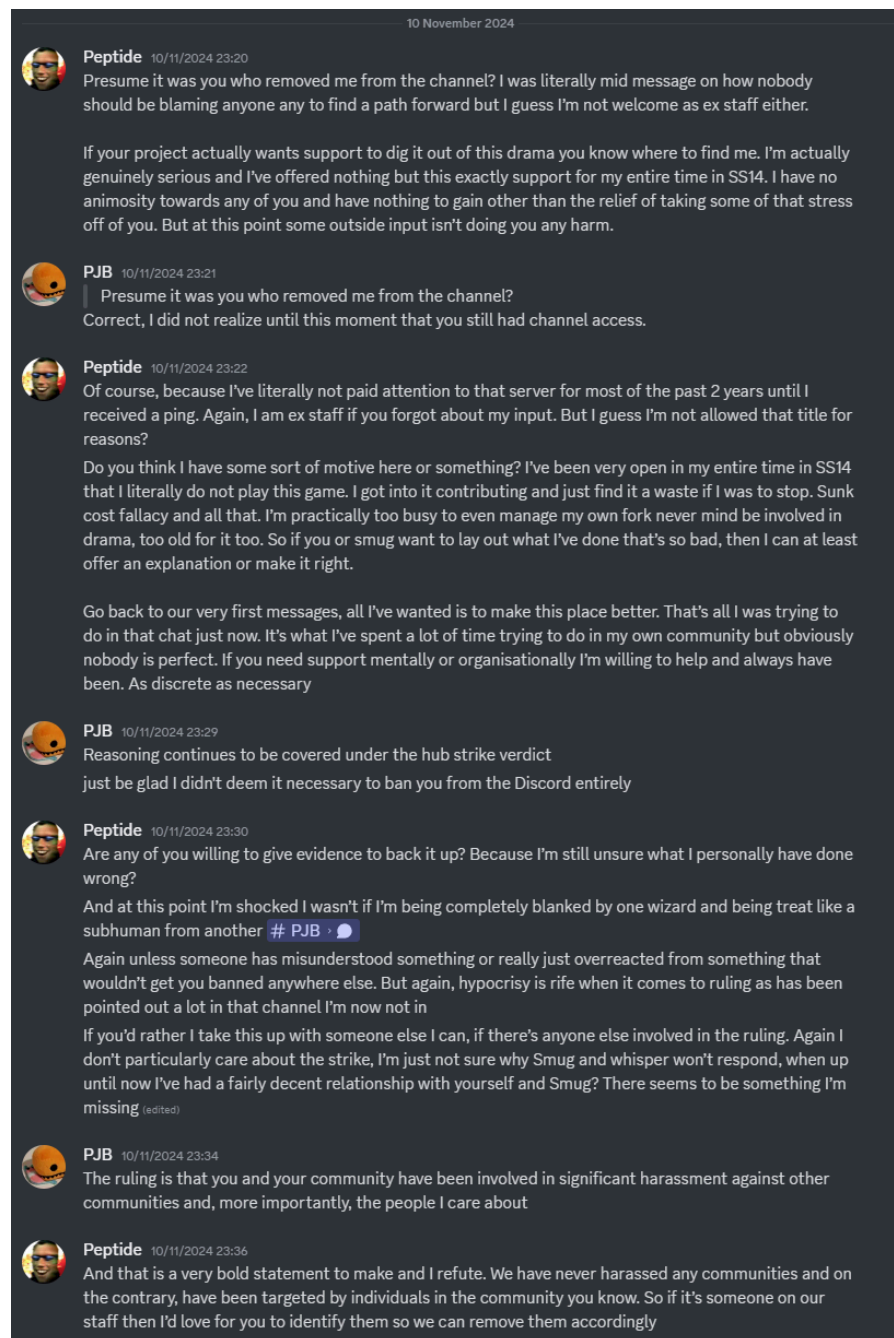

The day after. Speaks for itself. This is in relation to the mass admin walk out and me still having access to the staff-off-topic channel in Wizden as I'm ex staff and that is allowed. I was offering advice and questioning how things got the way they are, trying to genuinely help and was removed.

Notice how most of my messages go ignored and they remain on the line of hostility. Towards the end we start to get some real truth in the matter (well sort of, still need a list of the communities plural that I've harmed, more on that in the forum rebuttals). But specifically the people they care about. Again plural, I can only assume this whole thing is about RMC but who knows and again, no harassment of any kind there.

Figure E-PJB-8
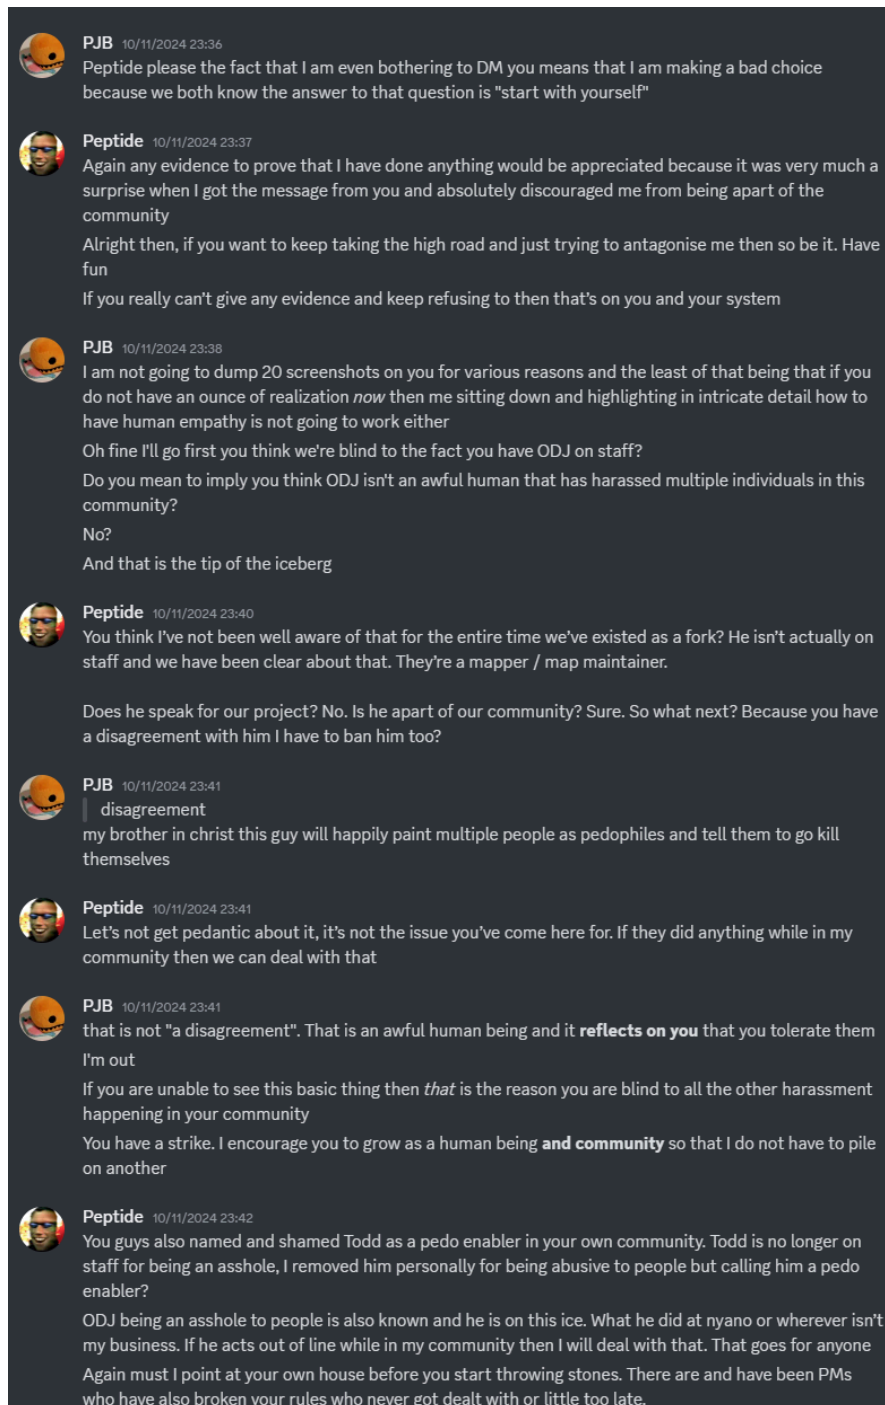

Timestamps show this is the next message. PJB leads again with an attack on me. I then get a lesson in human empathy from the person who ignores most of my communications and especially when I've shown above and beyond levels of empathy reaching out to them to help and support on multiple occasions even after getting abusive messages like fuck yourself with a rake or pathetic piece of shit. I guess I'm an idiot for trying.

We then finally get to what I think might be the point of the strike, which is truly bizarre given the reasons given for the strike. As a reminder I've been painted in this conversation and others as some sort of ring leader perpetuating harassment against multiple communities and involved in it myself, and now we get to the fact ODJ at this time was a head mapper in Singularity Network, which as we specifically delineated in our org chart is a contributor role and not a staff role.

ODJ was appointed as head mapper in January 2024 and I can't remember if they lost that role or what during their time with us but they didn't actually start mapping until around July 2024 if discord messages serve. They've had various levels of involvement through our history which I won't deny, but from what I know their main issues are around the Nyano dehub time which again was around April 23. Their actions are their own and I've made it clear the rules apply to everyone so nothing has happened related to Singularity involving them that I know of. As previously stated we removed Todd for being volatile towards another member of staff and ODJ received the same warning to a lesser degree hence retaining their role. As far as I can tell the whole drama is between them and one or two key Wizden staff members, and as previously stated originated from Wizdens handling of dismissing a staff member and onwards.

So to me I categorise things like that as a personal drama between people. Can it evolve to harassment? Of course it can. I don't claim to know all of the facts, but equally because Wizden leadership weren't transparent with the facts and still don't take proper accountability or transparency then you wonder why some people perpetuate what they know? Again, I am not condoning any harassment here, just speaking from what I know. Anyone spreading misinformation or causing drama in my community will be removed. Yes we have had lapses sometimes as every community does, specifically when we get targeted by people and emotions start to run high. But that doesn't stop me from keeping standards and removing things that cross the line. I removed some just today on 01/02/2025 in fact and warned the user.

PJB continues to throw stones at me personally in this conversation and so I point at them to fix their own mess first. Having maintainers and project managers who cause so much stress and hurt for other people and they're allowed to stay, not to mention the people getting outer for similar allegations they lay at other people as mentioned at the bottom. I recall in hosting chat when MetalGearSloth said that publicly about Todd and PJB had to tell them to redact the name because it is effectively slander.

Figure E-PJB-9
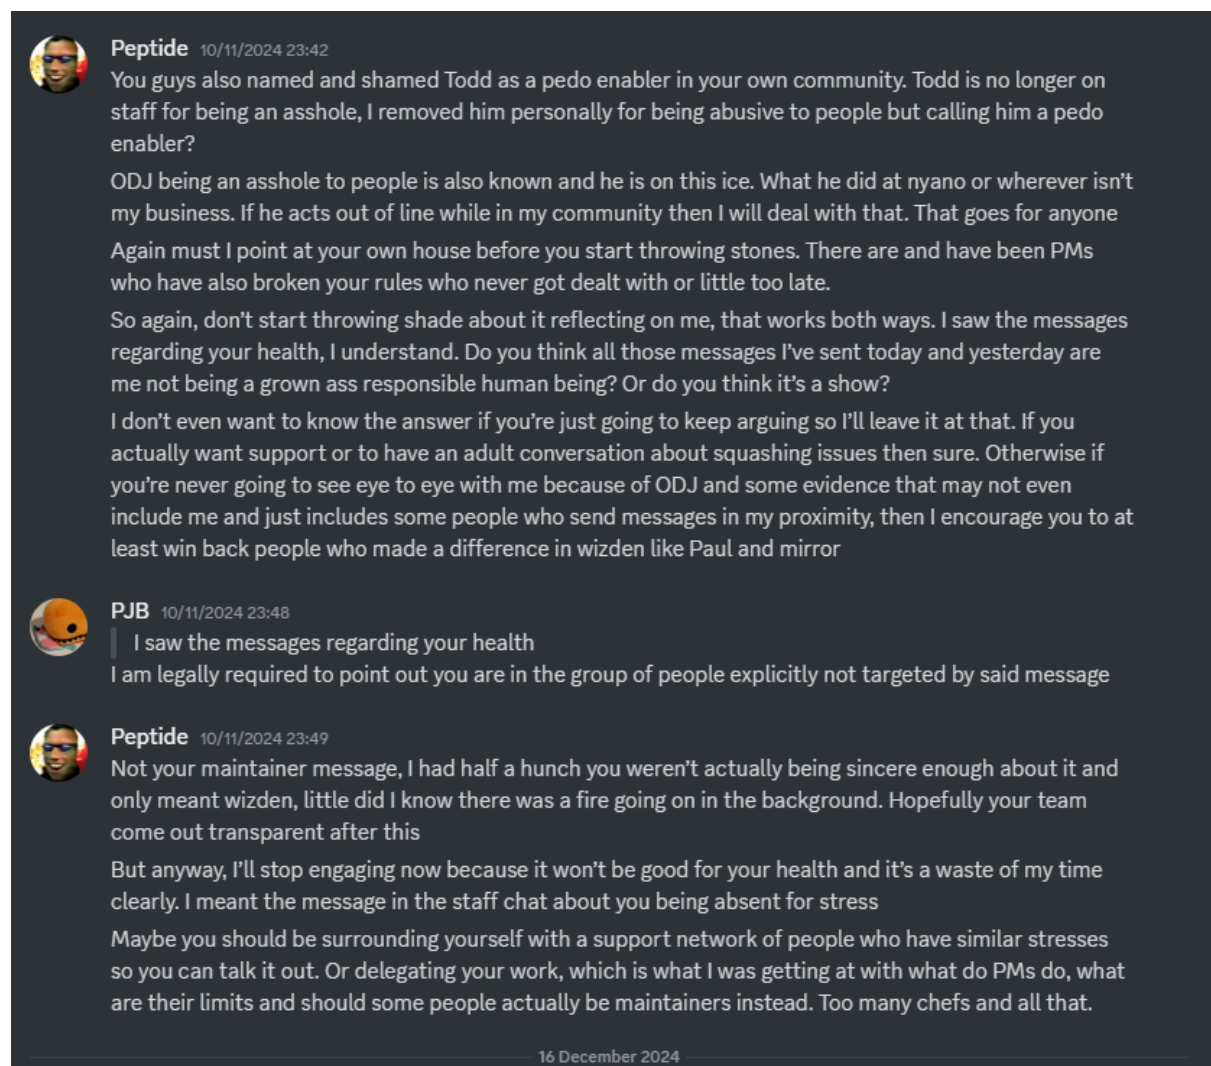

Continuation of the conversation.

I make the point again that I'm willing to talk about the issues at hand.

The message I'm referring to I thought was about their health was a message they sent in the maintainer chat below labelled Figure E1. Again, I've tried on many occasions to help over the years to avoid this exact situation from occurring. Maybe it wouldn't have worked but who knows, since I've tried my best to offer support and even in this conversation but no, they have to point out that I'm not worthy of an apology. Now that I don't have access to the staff off topic chat anymore I can't offer the evidence but it was regarding them being stressed.

At the bottom of my main message I reference some past project managers who have left the project for various reasons but it being mismanaged down the toilet is potentially part of that. I spoke with Paul about similar issues in the past and he agreed and I started contributing around the same time as Mirrorcult and felt we always had a similar vibe for ideas on gameplay. They were my head admin when I was there when it first became a thing and I was surprised to see they had left as PM when I came back recently.

Again I offer advice to help them overcome the situation.

Figure E-PJB-10

16 December 2024

PJB 16/12/2024 19:42
Hello,

You will either get VMSolidus to contact me, leave EE, or your server is getting dehubbed.
I am not fucking around, and I am sending this to all EE partners

Peptide 16/12/2024 19:43
Literally nothing to do with me and why VM? Oniks is the one with the issue?

PJB 16/12/2024 19:43
You are an EE member
You are thereby endorsing their actions

Peptide 16/12/2024 19:43
Not how that works but alright

PJB 16/12/2024 19:44
Yes, yes it is

Peptide 16/12/2024 19:44
Having an EE fork is all it takes to be on the "council". I don't get involved in much that happens there and don't even contribute to the fork. But it's nice that you want to talk to me now that you have an issue
After your last comments why should I help you at all? I'll forward on your message anyhow

PJB 16/12/2024 20:03
As is clearly obvious in the EE #council-discussions channel, the EE council has decided to harass me and at least one member is explicitly trying to cause both me and the project me direct harm, including IRL. We consider your server complicit in this behavior by being on the council.

I will be dehubbing your server in 24 hours unless the Einstein Engines council either desists in harassing me and upstream Space Station 14, or you choose to leave your involvement in said project. (edited)

Peptide 16/12/2024 20:36
And what compensation do we get for the harassment our way for things other members of the community are doing? The stress and anxiety you cause people because you fail to seek advice or admit when you're wrong? You've made many people quit or go on break because of the way you handle things. But whatever

My final messages continued on. This is later referenced in RF3 in which this is me being given "a chance to leave with evidence clearly presented and he chose to side with the harasser".

As you can see this is a clearly evidenced message with a choice of leaving. No, in fact this is a threat with zero evidence and a demand to get someone to contact them otherwise there are consequences. I'm not a messenger, I don't speak for EE, I'm not a member of SimpleStation who are the organisation owners of EE.

I have never endorsed anything, just not refuted it again as we have covered in other evidence here. Despite that I actually did forward on the message to VM and the council (so complied but still got dehubbed) and as stated elsewhere I don't respond to threats, so was willing to get dehubbed because of that. Not for being a part of EE.

My last message is a jibe back given this whole conversation history you have now viewed. On two occasions sending horrible messages causing me stress and anxiety and not wishing I never devoted so much of my time and energy to the SS14 community, often at the expense of my own relationships. (My partner loves to tell me that I talk to strangers on the internet and to "get off that game" when I'm coding or something).

Figure E1

08 November 2024

Miss Nanotransen 🛡 08/11/2024 01:19
i just want to write this to everybody i've hurt or upset or screamed at or anything else to apologize and say i'm really fucking sorry for everything.

I feel like a broken fucking person and know i've let that affect how i've interacted with everybody else here and that i've cared about. i can't offer anything other than a late half-assed non-specific apology or even a promise because god i fucking wish i knew how to improve or even fix anything about myself in the first place let alone for everybod yesle

i'm so fucking sorry for everything

🎰 33 ☺

Rebuttals

Figure R1

1. I was never involved with Nyano and again was staff at Wizards Den at the time, long before you were even involved in this project.
2. My involvement with SSMV was also miniscule. I was interested in the prospect of decentralised auth because I've long been a proponent of decentralisation for a number of reasons not just limited to the wizden auth going down periodically and dooming us all. I had never contributed there and over its lifetime I have advertised my server there but that's about it. I don't know Skye and have had zero dealing with any drama they have been involved with.
3. Name any more drama I've been involved in other than the EE fiasco which again, I have no allegiance to them. They're simply our upstream codebase for two forks and I only chose them for that because of their loadout system. It's not that deep.
4. If PJB wants to send official communications through DM and append them with abusive messages and to quote them, harassment, then I don't think its bad to A) share that message of dehubbing with my team at the highest level, not at game admin level, and later to share it to contributors after they lost all my respect for being abusive. To this day it is still a surprise they sent those messages. PJB has some sort of personal issues with me and I can only speculate why. And you expect me not to share the latter ones to show how utterly horrid they have been to me? The only way to prove it is to show the receipts. A lot of people are still blind to it and wont ask questions.

Figure R2

emisse 🛡 17/12/2024 00:56
what happened to you peptide

👑 3 😊

you were my homie

Katsun (Bounce Goops) 17/12/2024 00:56
emisse just do it

🐰 @emisse Click to see attachment 🖼
Play Caves of Qud 17/12/2024 00:56
truly saving the screenshot

Mr.Shitpants Albur Rolon/Tolvo R 17/12/2024 00:56
well ima get snacks n do work stuff, hopefully this will be over by then, cya later peoples (edited)

Sloth 🔵 17/12/2024 00:56
bro was an admin here once and went so far off the deep end

ForgeFatherHigh 17/12/2024 00:57
that's not very polite is it?

emisse 🛡 17/12/2024 00:57
peptide i fucking defended you for years i considered you close after we mapped together and helped each other out for so long

I went off the deep end? No, I just got bored of being ignored and undervalued for trying to improve the project so I went and did my own thing. Literally tried to just spread fallout to SS14, ultimately changed our upstream and now I'm the antichrist?

Figure R3

ONIKS 11/12/2024 09:03
Tomorrow I will continue working on the DMCA and stuff. @Council

Since wizden decided to break their own rules and be a part of this whole debacle on sunrise side, my plan is to:
1) Send sunrise pre-court complaint letter. I am sure it will go nowhere as their headmins decided to ignore me on Discord as well, and since they're in Russia - they are pretty much out of the reach.
2) Let Github know we're working on the court order in order to extend the DMCA.
3) Contact abuse email of Hetzner to let them know about wizden inaction and complacency in order to shut hub down and force wizden to do anything, bring attention to their participation in license abuse and basically force their hand to either double-down with helping sunrise or pressure them into dehubbing sunrise
Basically fellas, be ready with infra alternatives
Slap council for me
@TCJ

Peptide 11/12/2024 13:34
No doubt gonna get all of EE dehubbed just for association 😂 I had issues with people not agreeing with licensing months and months ago, told wizden then there needs to me a mechanical way to better enforce it. Got told I'm stupid more or less.

Anyway we were planning on making a new hub this month just because, and already spoken with Skye about forking SSMV if we wanted

Let's talk about this one. Oniks lays out a message about DMCAing Wizden over seemingly legitimate licensing issues. Nothing is mentioned at this time about CSAM or whatever else makes it into the eventual report. This is seemingly all about licensing and nothing to do with disrupting SS14. I barely know Oniks so I won't comment on that but what I will say is I then making a joke about us all getting dehubbed, hence the emoji. I then talk about a licensing issue we had which was resolved by PJB. At no point in this picture am I saying it was not resolved or Wizden did not help? What I'm referring to is being told its stupid to try mechanically police license violations and automate detection. This was in July in hostbus. Aka checks and balances. I then talk about some other irrelevant stuff in that picture. This is oniks talking about his personal DMCA for his codebase and nothing to do with me or EE for that matter. It's just coincidental they post it in this chat full of people who may be interested. I couldn't care less. I find DMCA's pretty pointless and I'm extremely jaded about licensing now.

Figure R4
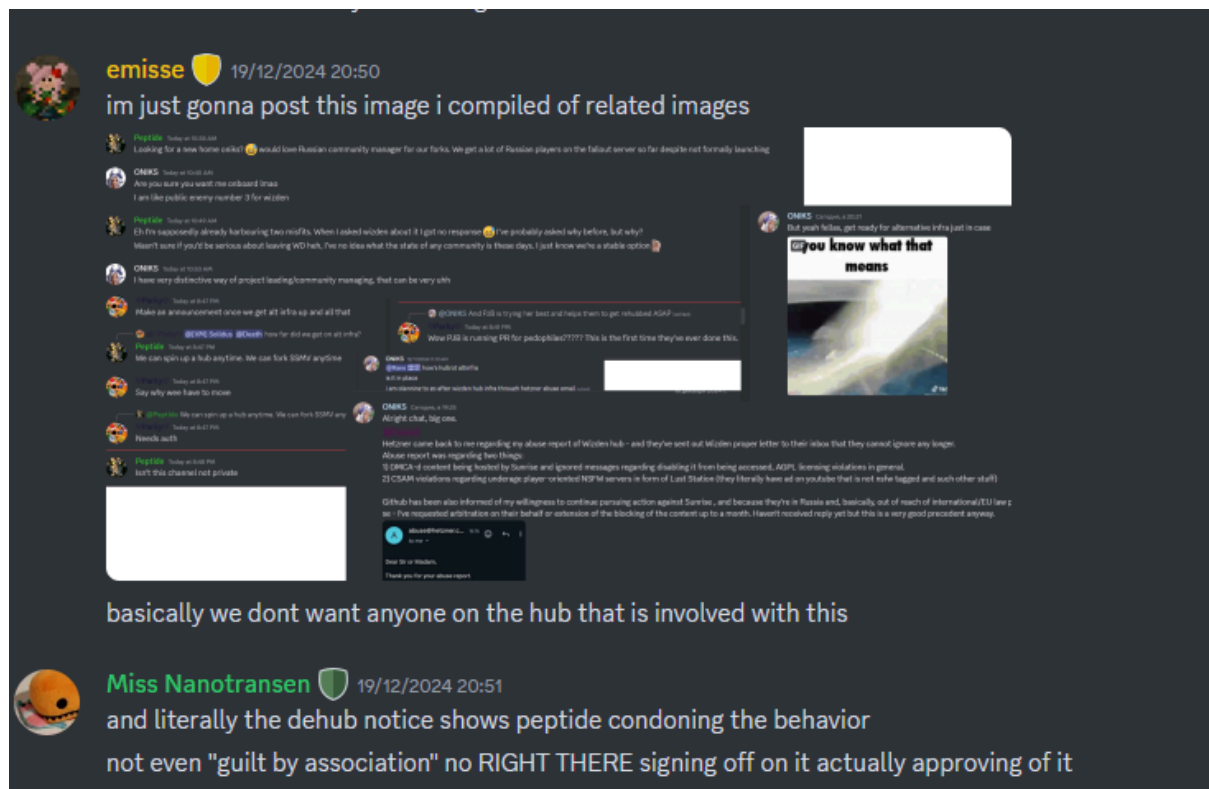

Again, this is the evidence banded about which I have addressed above. However what even is that screenshot on the left? Can we please put outlines on things so I can tell when you've mashed things together? So let's provide the full context for those messages which were in April 2024, context for the ones I'm actually involved in.

Figure 4.2

So firstly this was again in April 2024, many months prior to any current drama. This is not me inviting some "harassers" into my community. This is me making a joke about them joining, as denoted by the emoji which I use often when saying throwaway comments. Below is the extent of my DMs with Oniks. We have barely communicated outside of public channels so calling me affiliated with whatever they get up to is a stretch.

My comments about harbouring two misfits is also a bit of a joke as I'm referring to ODJ and Todd Howard, people who at this point have been pretty quiet in the community and the latter I was still to receive anything about that was evidence.

I then reaffirm that I have no idea what any other community is up to because I have my own community to worry about.

The Emisse evidence on the left is then cut extremely close together that it almost looks like the same conversation, and is so low res it took me ages to read any of the words to find the context, so see that below in Figure 4.3

Figure 4.3
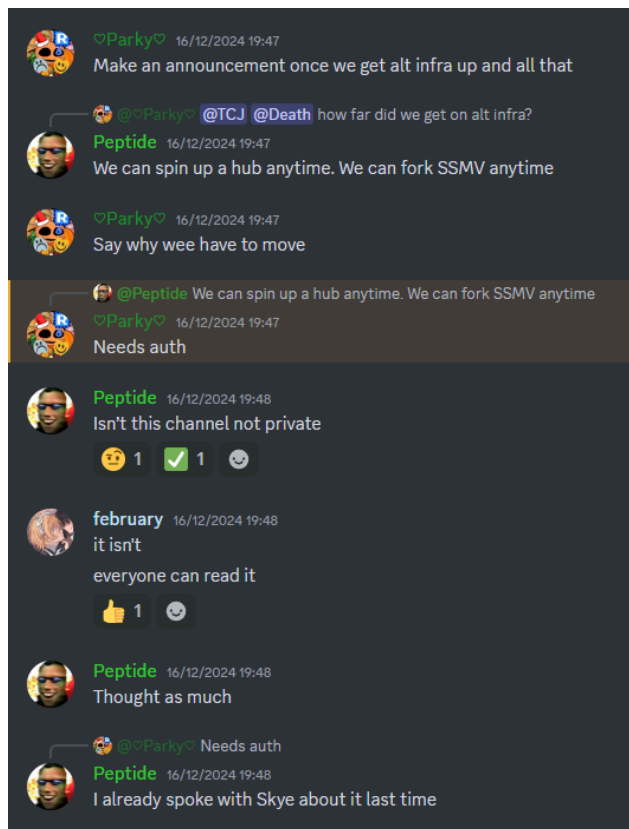

Again additional context either side of the sliced messages. Parky who is part of simplestation / parkstation is asking VM and Death how far they got on setting up alt infrastructure aka hub or launcher, not sure.

I then say we can spin up a hub anytime, which isn't bad and is what Wizden wanted us to do? I also say we can fork SSMV anytime, but in actual fact I personally don't want to do that work if I don't have to.

I then make the observation on this channel not being private, which then my next message is me confirming I knew it wasn't. I'm not a moderator or admin of the EE discord so I have no idea of knowing what the setup is. Not that it matters.

Figure 4.4

My full DM history with Oniks. This is what an affiliate co conspirator discussion looks like.

ONIKS
oniks

This is the beginning of your direct message history with ONIKS.

8 Mutual Servers · Add Friend | Block | Report Spam

26 August 2023

Peptide 26/08/2023 22:06
Hey 👋 hope you don't mind the message, we've had a staff applicant in from samo who said they were your previous heads of staff. Just wanted to check in if that's okay and see if that's accurate and why they got demoted

ONIKS 26/08/2023 22:08
Heya! Can you share some info, who's that? I don't think we've actually got rid off our head of staff for quite some time.

Peptide 26/08/2023 23:06
I might be wrong, you guys are white dream right? Their user is samovarec and they put in their application it was due to inactivity
It's only for a maptainer role and tbh they've not been active at all so I'd expect them to make a map before I gave them a role but just wanted to do some DD

27 August 2023

ONIKS 27/08/2023 06:07
No actual idea, who's that. They've never ever been staff member at any capacity, nonetheless head of staff.

Peptide 27/08/2023 10:00
Huh interesting 😅 if they ever respond I'll do some digging. Thanks 🙏

12 August 2024

ONIKS 12/08/2024 13:23
Heya!
I am organizing alternative hostbus for hosts/PMs, that is unaffilated with wizden, would be cool if you would also participate -> https://discord.gg/NCZzBDd5EN (edited)

YOU'VE BEEN INVITED TO JOIN A SERVER
SS14 Hostbus KAZANTIP 2008 REMIX
● 10 Online ● 15 Members Joined

Peptide 12/08/2024 13:50
howdy, of course 🙂

Figure R5

Oh boy, a juicy one.
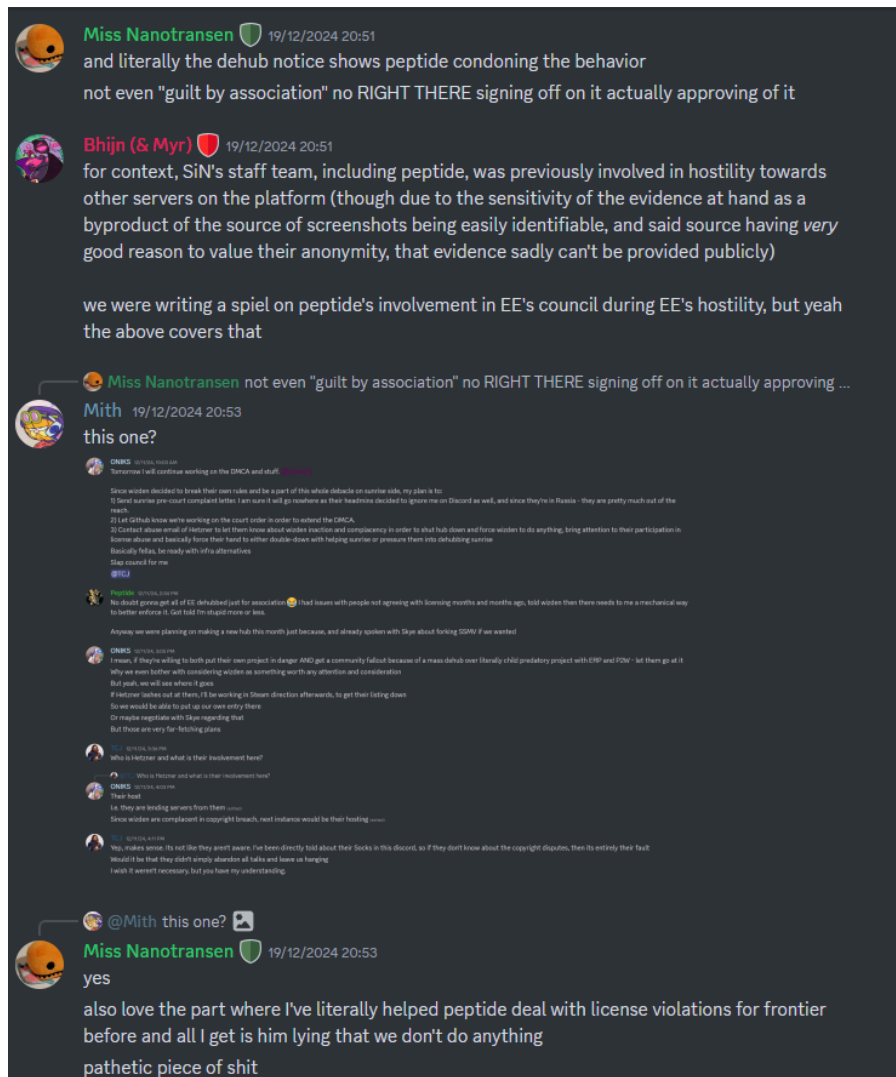

Firstly at Bhijn, where to even start.
- We have never been involved in hostility towards other servers. Some of us have made both public comments on how certain servers administer, which is not "hostility towards other servers", especially if it's private, and is the sort of stuff every server including Wizden does, public and private.
- "Servers" plural. Please list the servers who we have been hostile towards? It's fairly public; we assume it's RMC and by extension Wizden as you can see from the timeline above. Again, nothing hostile towards their staff specifically, just the way they operate which we disagree with, but that's their prerogative, and it's fine for people to disagree with you.
- Thirdly, if you have an issue with someone, it's good practice to reach out to them and let them know you have an issue. I thought I had a good relationship with a number of people involved including the RMC leads but apparently not.
- I am not responsible for what some of my staff do or say when they play on other servers, see my previous comment, if you have an issue or a suspicion then bring it to me. I have a number of examples of people raising issues with me and taking it extremely seriously to the point of removing a number of previous staff. At the same time, what happens on your server is up to you to administer and we won't take baseless accusations or peoples personal drama seriously, you can ban them in your place and be done with it. I'm not your police force.

- We're pretty sure we know who your source is. It's not hard to know and we still can't think of anything that they might have "leaked" that could be "harassment" or "hostility". Again, hostility is something public and known. Please show me receipts of hostility. And just to add, see R1. At what point is leaking internal private conversations a breach of trust and at what point do you start applauding a whistleblower? Double standard much?
- Back to my previous point on who it is. Despite it being a breach of trust I'm willing to let it slide on whoever the leaker is provided you're able to provide the actual evidence for us to discuss. Again we're pretty certain of who it is and they still haven't been removed so take that as the assurance. Furthermore, if you simply ask for clarification on a point then you will receive it, rather than assuming the worst of people. Conversation is key.

Now onto my personal harasser, PJB.
- Not fun banding around that word is it.
- I am not Frontier, maybe you're confusing me with license violations that Checkraze have brought to you, easy mistake to make I guess but better to think before you speak?
- I did bring license violations to you which you did help resolve. Thank you. The process still wasn't fun however and my comments in the EE chat are not relating to you, but rather to the hostbus discussion as detailed in Figure R3. Not once did I say in that screenshot that you did not help, I'm saying I felt very dismissed when I suggested in hostbus that we attempt to mechanically monitor license violations to make detection easier. But somehow your raw hatred for me makes you jump to a totally off and worse conclusion and call me names yet again? I really need to know at what point you started to dislike me and why, again simply asking for clarification would have got it but we all know what ASS-U-ME does.
- So back to my first point in this section. If we go by your definition of what a harasser is, I have exhibited zero of these tendencies. If you use the American English dictionary definition then the majority of people on the internet are annoying, that doesn't mean I feel harassed everytime I read their messages. If we use the English Law definition as per the cambridge dictionary, both linked below, then I have at no point verbally abused you at least not to the extent and manner that you have to me. https://dictionary.cambridge.org/dictionary/english/harassment

And yet still I consider myself able to bury the hatchet, despite the distress you've caused me on a number of occasions. Which I especially don't think you would after this document is released and to be honest I don't see much benefit when I know you'll still hate me.

Figure R6

The assumptions and hyperbole, I cant.

> Miss Nanotransen 🛡 19/12/2024 21:00
> peptide is literally mentioned multiple times in the dehub doc
>
> emisse 🛡 19/12/2024 21:00
> being part of the council that sends false child sexual abuse material emails to try and get our service taken down so you can take over is too much
>
> 👑 5   👀 1   🙂
>
> Miss Nanotransen 🛡 19/12/2024 21:00
> including linking to prior actions of his community
>
> ⎸ 🐭 emisse being part of the council that sends false child sexual abuse material emails to try and get our ...
> Miss Nanotransen 🛡 19/12/2024 21:00
> Literally getting pinged multiple times and being able to go "hey uh, ain't that lying? Maybe we shouldn't lie to destroy the infrastructure of the project we depend on?" at any moment and deciding not to IS BEING COMPLICIT

- I've been mentioned a lot of times in a lot of places over the past year, apparently people like sharing the messages I get sent from prominent figures in the community.
- See Figure R3. I had no idea that CSAM was going to be used in that DMCA request and additionally I was not responsible for the DMCA or involved in any step of that process. I don't even think the DMCA was sent on behalf of the council? It was a DMCA claim between whitedream and Wizards Den for failing to take down licensed materials? Who knows.
- The assumption was to take over wizden too? Really? See above for my perceived reason for the DMCA claim. It isn't to "take down" Wizden and nobody has any intention of "taking over". What a wild claim that would literally be impossible? Yes there's a lot of talk in the EE discord about making an alt launcher and a lot of jokes around what to name it and to be a competitor with the SS14 launcher, but that would be unrelated to the DMCA?
- "Prior actions of his community". Again, useless comment and again if we want to talk about actions of communities then Wizden has its own skeletons.
- Figure R6.1 below shows the first time I was made aware of CSAM in the DMCA, which was a day later(?) The reason for mentioning it seems sound from Oniks though? It's not my DMCA or community so I'm not going to ask questions or assume they're lying? I'm literally not getting involved other than sending a few messages around the subject in the council chat. And pinged multiple times is a stretch. The council was pinged for the first message, then again for this one. So one ping after the CSAM allegation was made. Maybe again if we had a hostbus or similar that actually functioned then we could talk about our issues and resolve them instead of issuing strikes without discussion or resorting to DMCAs. Transparency is key.

Figure R6.1

ONIKS 16/12/2024 14:25
Alright chat, big one.
@Council
Hetzner came back to me regarding my abuse report of Wizden hub - and they've sent out
Wizden proper letter to their inbox that they cannot ignore any longer.
Abuse report was regarding two things:
1) DMCA-d content being hosted by Sunrise and ignored messages regarding disabling it from being accessed, AGPL licensing violations in general.
2) CSAM violations regarding underage player-oriented NSFW servers in form of Lust Station
(they literally have ad on youtube that is not nsfw tagged and such other stuff)

Github has been also informed of my willingness to continue pursuing action against Sunrise , and because they're in Russia and, basically, out of reach of international/EU law per se - I've requested arbitration on their behalf or extension of the blocking of the content up to a month. Haven't received reply yet but this is a very good precedent anyway.

A abuse@hetzner.c... 16:16
to me

Dear Sir or Madam,

Thank you for your abuse report.

We have informed the responsible customer of the report and asked them to look into this, resolve any potential issues, and send us a statement.

Please note that we cannot guarantee a personal response, or a particular outcome, but we strive to keep our network clean and appreciate you reaching out about this issue.

Important: Please leave [AbuseID:]
unchanged in the subject line when replying directly to this report.

Kind regards

Abuse Team

🦷 2   🗣 2   ☺

ONIKS 16/12/2024 14:32
This means that we will eventually get a public official statement regarding CSAM and AGPL violations on the wizden hub and they will comply, or they will decline, or they will change hosting (edited)

Figure R7

representatives from involved servers. (edited)

Bhijn (& Myr) 🛡️ 19/12/2024 21:01
EE's structure is one that revolves around a central council. the bigger the server, the more say they have in that council
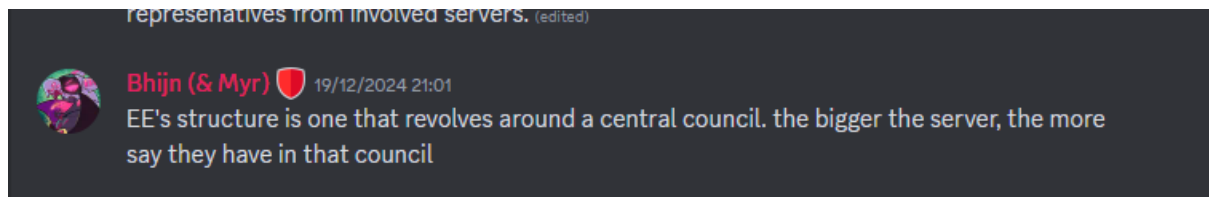

False. I don't speak for the council or the administration of Einstein Engines as I'm not a founder or involved with simplestation who are the organisation behind it, but this is false as far as I'm aware.

To be on the council all you need to do is have an EE fork. You then get equal say in any decision making which is for the better of the shared codebase. However in my experience the EE council has been pretty pointless in its whole existence, or that I'm literally not involved enough to notice or care what goes on.

So a word of advice and not to sound passive aggressive but don't speak about things you don't know anything about, especially if you are a PM and speak for your project as this is misinformation.

Figure R7

Miss Nanotransen 🛡 19/12/2024 21:11
Peptide is getting shafted for siding with the actions of many serial harassers, which he has been previously been warned about and has perpetrated himself

this tbh 4   🗣 1   ☺

This dude denies there is harassment happening all while his buddies call me a pedo in the same chat

😬 1   ☺

he could punch me in the same and play victim when I complain about it, no, he has

- Might I refer you back to the message where you threatened me to leave EE? It's not a case of siding with anyone, it's a case of standing up for myself when being threatened. Give me a list of the "many" serial harassers on the EE council. So far I'm only aware of 2 people who could possibly fall under the harasser title and one of them is serial and they're banned from EE.
- Perpetrated, okay. If it's not clear by now that there's some fantasy about my motive or involvement or lots of false assumptions and misinformation then sure.
- "Buddies". My relationship with EE is purely professional, as it is with most people in the SS14 space. Sorry to be blunt to a lot of people but most of you are aquaintances and even when I was very active in Wizden and nowhere else, I never really got involved in the other areas of the server or played games with any of you. I don't have time to be paying attention to multiple servers and there are very few people I would actually call friends but even then that's pretty shallow. Even prominent people on my staff I have never asked their real name, age etc. I know what country they are from and maybe what some of them do for work and maybe their general age although I've probably forgotten that already. If people call you that in the EE chat then take it to their moderators, It's not my job to moderate there or to correct people on things I know nothing about. I really don't care about the dealings of most other people or their communities so I'm not going to go digging to find out for you.

Figure R8

@ AdmiralObvious, no offence but no idea who you are and again the long tail of activity is either not something anyone is willing to share with me or to continue onto PJBs point:

@ PJB
- I can barely call asking for clarification on things, getting antagonised by your team's threats of blanket banning all AGPL forks on more than one occasions in the hosting chat, offering genuine support and advice on many occasions over the years to help the project and you specifically as spreading harassment and misinformation.
- So you wonder why when I get a message saying "Wizden are thinking about banning all AGPL forks", that I'm not going to appear all aggravated because I've put a lot of effort into my fork and because your team are having issues with moderation that falls on my neck?
- The mystery strike that based on other evidence is actually to do with historic things done by other people?

Figure R9

@Mith so what happened with the previous strike? all I've got here is "We have received reports that t…

nikthechampiongr 🛡️ 19/12/2024 21:26
Unfortunately this touches on harassment done on communities that isn't just wizden, and how we can publish the evidence on that what we need to exclude for the sake of those targeted is a bit unclear.
In either case, we have presented our case on why peptide and their servers appear to have been complicit in the reasons for the dehubbing if you are not convinced from it then there is not much I can do about it, you can hold your own opinion.
The decision however will be sustained.

"Appear to be complicit". So we're finally admitting that all might not be what it seems and that still nobody has reached out for clarification?

I've said it before and I'll say it again. You have a team of people who are "project managers" "community moderators" and other roles that change by the month, and yet you let the most hot headed personally involved LEADER of your organisation send out threats and official communications? Instead of having your specifically labelled team reach out to issue notices or clear things up.

Even after the first strike and the horrid messages I said that we have already taken steps to reduce whatever the perceived issue is and I was met with "Anyways if you did in fact tell your community to "knock it off" then that's good to hear. I hope to not have to communicate with you again so that the strike can naturally expire in a year. That's why there's 3 strikes after all"

Does this not show that we're willing to make changes when things are actually brought to us?

Now we move onto the latest forum post, I'll change the formatting of evidence to RF so there's room to expand later.

https://forum.spacestation14.com/t/open-discussion-about-issues-with-project-management-and-hub-enforcement/15373/18

Figure RF1
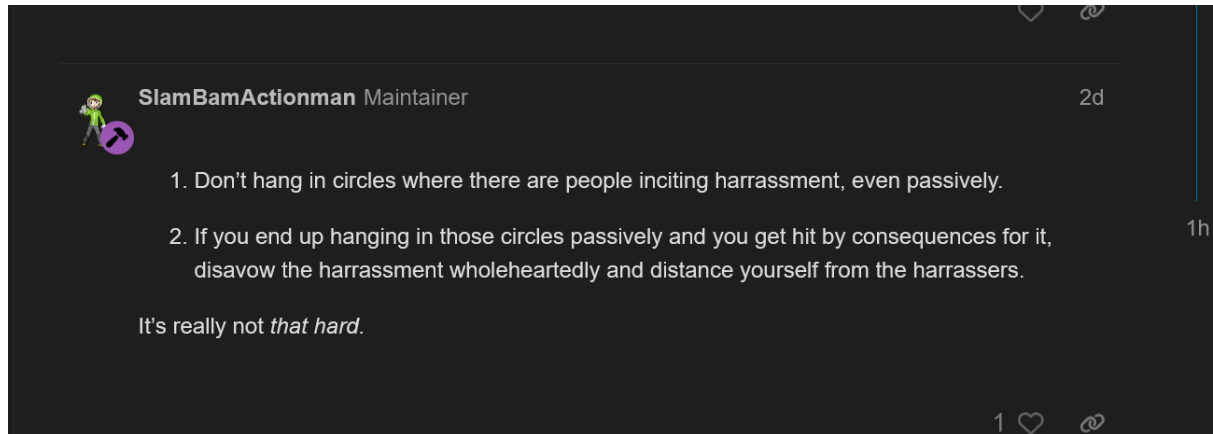

1. Ditto. There have been many cases now of this in Wizards Den whether it's harassment or otherwise. EE isn't a harassment server. If it has harassers in it that's nothing to do with me, I'm there because it's my upstream and I need code support.
2. I have on multiple occasions said I don't stand with any harassers. Point me to something legitimate that isn't two people throwing insults at each other and I will act accordingly. I have also said on many occasions I do not stand with EE. See answer 1, I can leave at any time and would leave if I see a need to, but being threatened to leave because I don't do what PJB says does not fly with me. I don't accept threats and made a stance specifically because of that NOT to leave.

Figure RF2
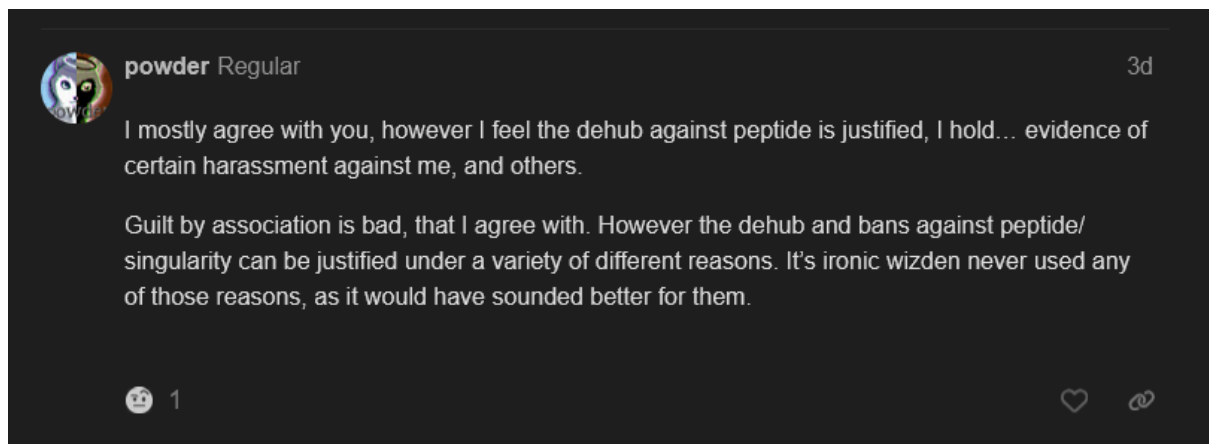

Hello again Powder (powderuuf on discord). For everyone reading this now, Powder was taken on to Singularity Network as a moderator, which is our trial admin position. They joined our discord on the 07/05/2024 and were later banned from our discord on the 18/05/2024 which we will cover.

They applied for an admin position on the 9th of May which is still public here. In hindsight this was an extremely short time in the community and they should have been told to wait at least a month or two of being active before applying for a staff position, but I recognised they seemed to be very active and passionate about helping and at the time it seemed like a good idea. Do note, our Lead Admin at the time Skorn abstained from the vote due to having previous history with Powder at parkstation. Skorn remained objective and impartial and the remaining admins voted to let Powder join the team. Very quickly they made members of our team feel uncomfortable with the messages they were sending as shown in RF2.1 below until all members who originally voted for them to join the team quickly did a uturn and didn't want them in the team anymore. Skorn as lead admin was the one to break the news to Powder.

I was on holiday at the time trying to relax on a Beach while simultaneously dealing with Powder who was threatening me in DMs. During this conversation they seem to be fixated on how this affects their reputation, to which I let them know this would all be kept private but they themselves started to share they had been let go and lied to about their assurances coming to Singularity. I reaffirmed this was based on them not bringing drama here which they did, as multiple people had messaged me to detail what they had actually been removed for in other places.

Compound that with the weird blackmail and other stuff in RF2.1 as well as the images in RF2.2 and 2.3 which are far too creepy and conspiracy theory for my tastes and want that stuff as far away from my gaming community as possible. Out of decency for them I kept all of this in house but if they really want me to post the entire chat history to prove there was absolutely zero harassment going on, and their interpretation of that word is us letting them go during their trial period for bringing drama to the community which I specifically warned them against, and ultimately not being a good fit for the team. Do note RF2.2 was deleted by powder in our DMs.

RF2.1

— ☆ powder · *。 16/05/2024 09:38
When I put this much effort into an archive to expose someone, they likely did something REALLY bad. Because I just spent at least a day compiling stuff against these people.

I sleepy, but I has to make sure their set straight.
For context: the people in this folder kinda did blackmail on others
Really mean v:
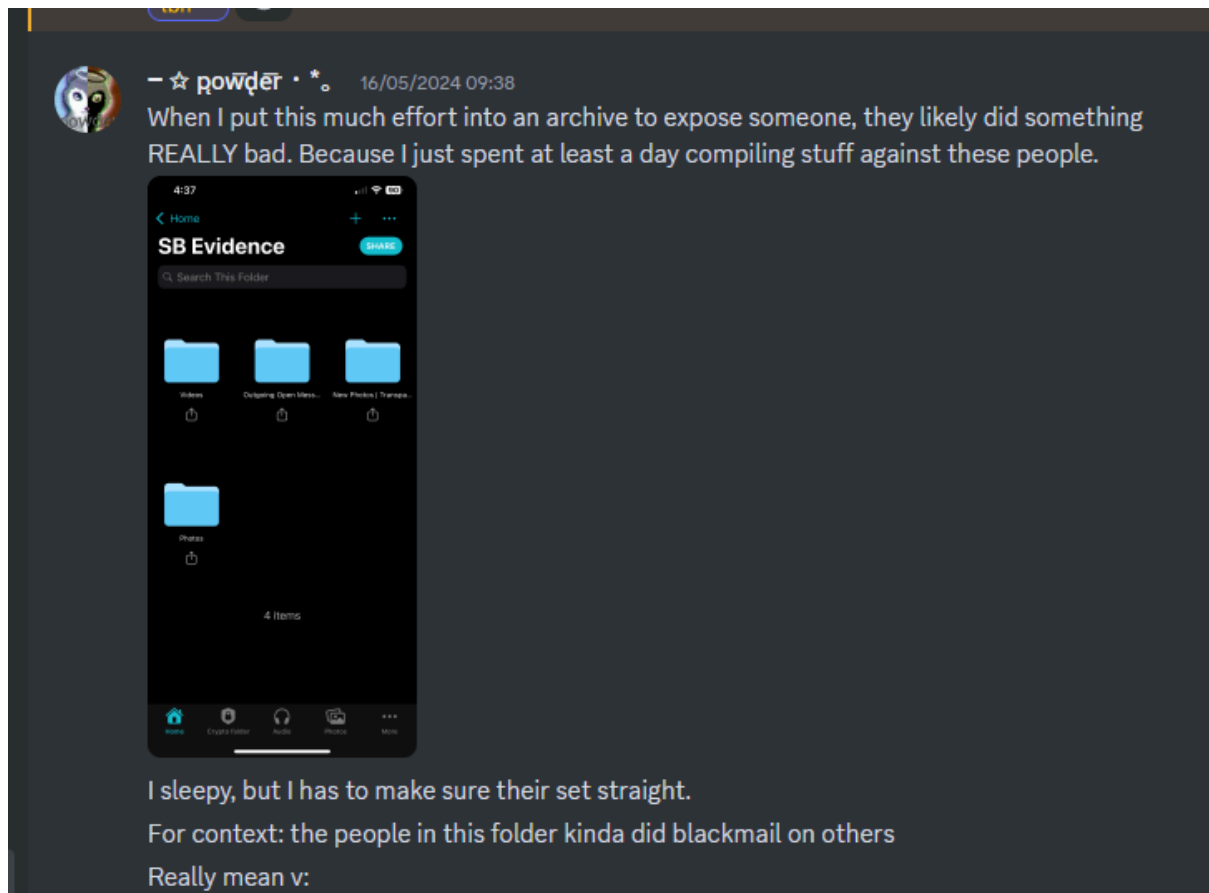

Its nice that you have hobbies but I really don't want to be reading about blackmail and stuff in our staff off topic channel or in any way involved in it. I'm here to make a game and have fun.

RF2.2 and RF2.3
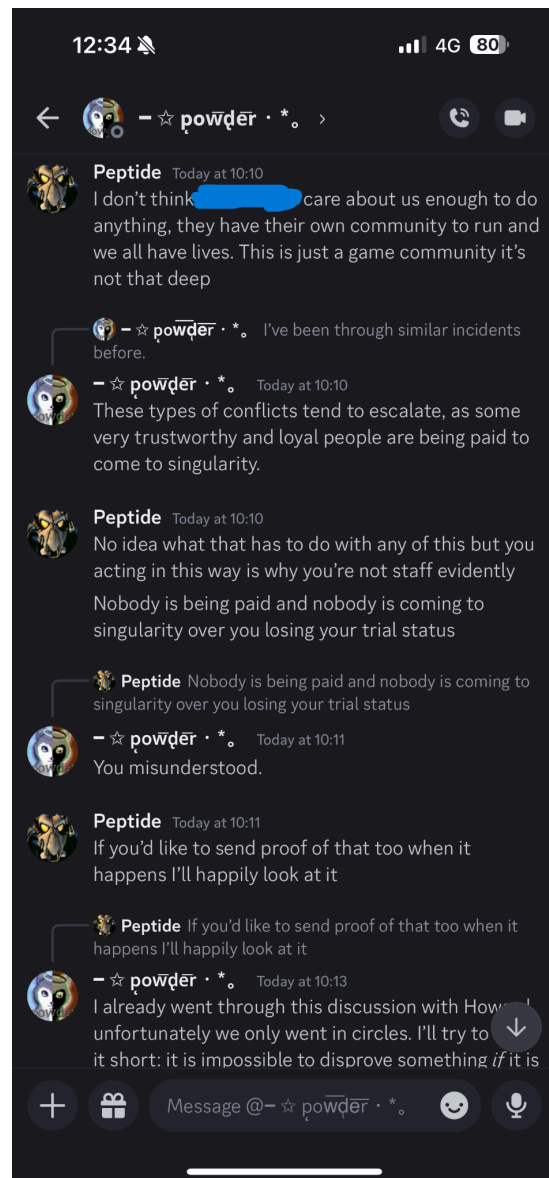

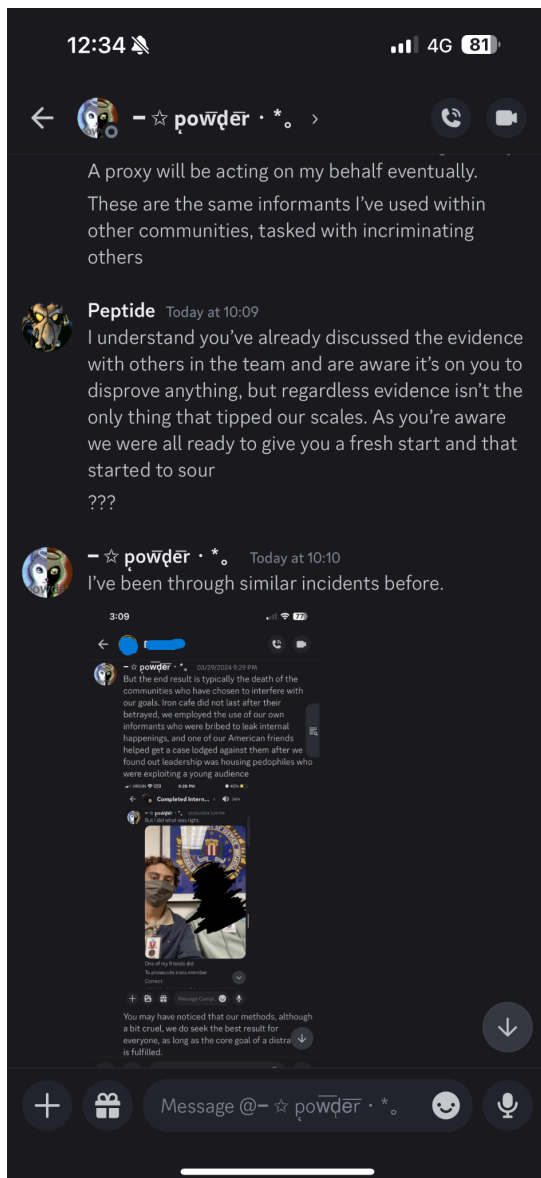

Threats of escalation, paying people to infiltrate and all this other stuff is just too much conspiracy theory for me. I was on a Beach at the time on holiday for a wedding and really didn't need this drama in my inbox.

So to summarise this section, if you really do hold evidence of harassment by me or against anyone else then please publicly post it and prove it. Otherwise stop slandering me and my community in public forums over topics you have zero involvement in. You have shared your evidence with others and they also can't see any wrongdoing so at a point just admit you've got it wrong.

RF3 - Post 30

I'm not going to address the first comment because its been rehashed a million times now.

- "We gave him a chance to leave with evidence clearly presented and he chose to side with the harassers". See Figure E-PJB-10
- Provide receipts please.

RF3.2
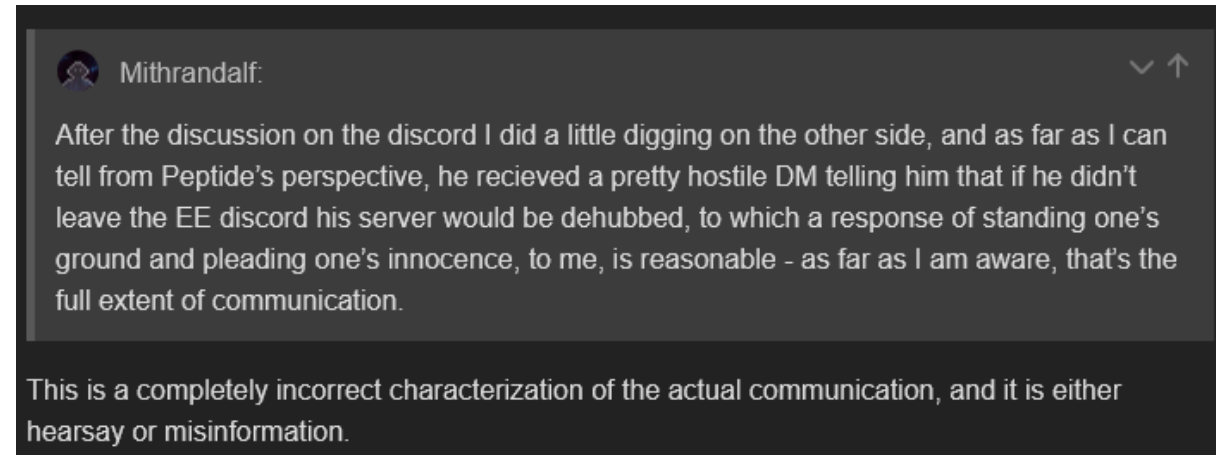

"Best interest of the community". Really? This chain of events has drastically split the community. You can pretend that EE is a minority of people and that they're all horrible so you'll be better off without them, but the effects are much further reaching than that.

Firstly, the Nyano dehubbing scared off just about every SS13 community that was even considering coming over here. Secondly, Goob, Frontier and a selection of other servers make up the majority of the EN speaking servers that aren't Wizden. Your own servers are in disarray due to mismanagement that your head admins felt enough to walk out on, so this large section of the community you are spitting and pissing off will feel less likely to stick around. Remember I was on your side during the nyano dehub. Some of what's gone on is warranted, but the way it's handled is always absolutely poor and some of the people involved point blank should not be public facing representatives of the project. As I've previously warned.

RF3.3

Mithrandalf:

After the discussion on the discord I did a little digging on the other side, and as far as I can tell from Peptide's perspective, he recieved a pretty hostile DM telling him that if he didn't leave the EE discord his server would be dehubbed, to which a response of standing one's ground and pleading one's innocence, to me, is reasonable - as far as I am aware, that's the full extent of communication.

This is a completely incorrect characterization of the actual communication, and it is either hearsay or misinformation.

Are you actually blind? Or just blind to reason once you get a negative bias towards someone? The receipts are above, you have the exact same ones if anyone wants to validate and cross check them. See Figure E-PJB-10 you point blank threatened to dehub us if we didn't do what you asked. There is no hub rule that says "Do what PJB asks".

Parrot the harassment line at me all you want and dehub yourself. SS14 as a project would be better off without official servers is a line I've said before but we know that's not realistic.

RF3.4

Mithrandalf:

being standoffish, short-tempered, and just generally rude, to peers, community members, and when talking about people outside the community.
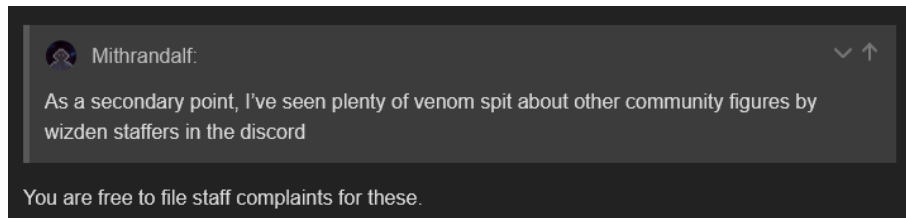

Yeah see so what generally happens is:

1. Harass wizden staff
2. We tell them to "go fuck yourself" after dealing with their shit for months.
3. Screenshot the above
4. "Look at how rude wizden is."

Peptide, for example, is plenty guilty of this.

1. Fantasise about being harassed by members of the community.
2. Say stupid unprofessional shit instead of actually asking them what's up or dealing with it.
3. Get called out for it because it's not good behaviour.
4. Strike the community because you hold all the cards.

You see I'm starting to get snarky now myself having to reread all this crap. I'm fully transparent about the goings on here. I'm still confused whether you mean Wizden staff or RMC staff but regardless the outcome is the same, no harassment by myself has taken place and if my staff have then I'm still yet to be made aware. And I have receipts of other people who have brought issues to us and we resolved them immediately.

RF3.5

> Mithrandalf:
> As a secondary point, I've seen plenty of venom spit about other community figures by wizden staffers in the discord
>
> You are free to file staff complaints for these.

And they will be freely ignored. We know what accountability is when people raise complaints about project managers and it's fairly well documented at this point. Even if something is done it's usually the straw that breaks the camel's back after too long.

RF3.6

> Mithrandalf:
> More communication generally.
>
> We communicate plenty when it comes to hub rulings. People regularly ask us questions ahead of time. Both the Nyano and the EE dehubs were preempted with plenty of communication that went no where.
>
> In fact, a strike is in and of itself a communication. We gave Peptide's server a strike for harassment. That's communication, because they can't just undo their actions. Of course, they didn't exactly use the opportunity to improve, so then they had to be dehubbed for harassment later anyways.
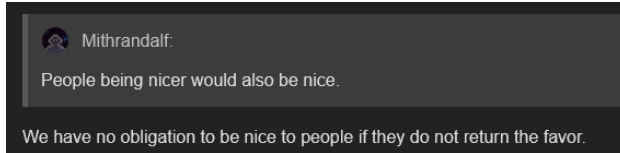

Correct, a strike is communication. It's an enforcement action. Instead of compiling a supposed mountain of evidence, the courteous thing to do and the most productive in a cooperative community would be to raise the concern first thing in a neutral semi public setting like the hostbus, or better yet, tell server owners to attempt to resolve the issues themselves as a first port of call before you get involved.

If the evidence is overwhelming in the first instance and absolute, then sure, issue the strike as the first communication. So immediately those things don't correlate in our instance as you say there's a mountain of evidence. If this was obtained over time by a mole or informant then again, look in the mirror and act first with communication rather than waiting to try and incriminate people more.

In that conversation I explain how we've already taken steps to better ourselves. We held an emergency staff meeting to find out what's going wrong. We got rid of problematic staff and warned others, and we introduced core values to better hold ourselves accountable outside of just having rules and staff etiquette. We tell you this in that chat and you say good. Your informant will be able to confirm all of this. I regularly ask the staff if there are any issues or problematic people and remind the community they can report staff if needed. You then dehub us for EE reasons rather than our own?

RF3.7

> Mithrandalf:
> People being nicer would also be nice.
>
> We have no obligation to be nice to people if they do not return the favor.

Holy fucking moses.

RF3.8

> Mithrandalf:
> then taking the high road is part of the job, and benefits everyone involved.
>
> It absolutely does not by default. Having to have the 100th argument about hub rules enforcement only benefits the people that seek to violate them. Nyanotrasen does the most vile shit imaginary and I have to write an apology for "not following process", like that minifies what Nyano did? Yeah, we see who this benefits.
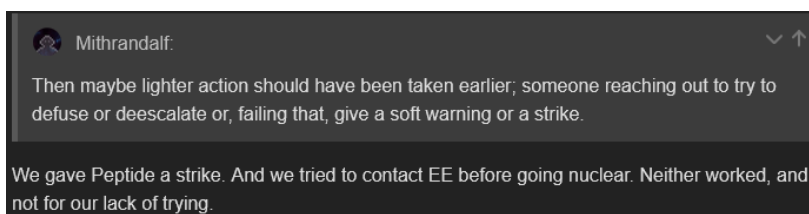

I'd just like to point out again that I was generally in support of the dehubbing as I was very entrenched in Wizden at the time. I agree that people who rule lawyer are a pain in the ass, however when you're the listed game developer for this game / platform, you need robust processes in place

I really don't care about the nyano dehub and I'm not even using it as an example, but if you're not able to identify issues with your processes and take steps to improve them then you should not be leading a project, or at best you should seek advice from someone who does know. That would have avoided needing to write an apology or whatever and would remove you from the equation of everything going on now. The problem with most things in life is people. Remove the people and remove the problem. Or have robust processes to protect your people.

RF3.9

> Mithrandalf:
> Then maybe lighter action should have been taken earlier; someone reaching out to try to defuse or deescalate or, failing that, give a soft warning or a strike.
>
> We gave Peptide a strike. And we tried to contact EE before going nuclear. Neither worked, and not for our lack of trying.

Oh this again. EE the council or codebase or whatever does not equal EE forks and downstreams. I'm not even going to repeat myself on my involvement in EE or why the council is pointless but if it all hinges on you having a conversation with VMSolidus who does not speak for my community or my projects then please let me know what you're smoking, because I'll need some to take the edge off.
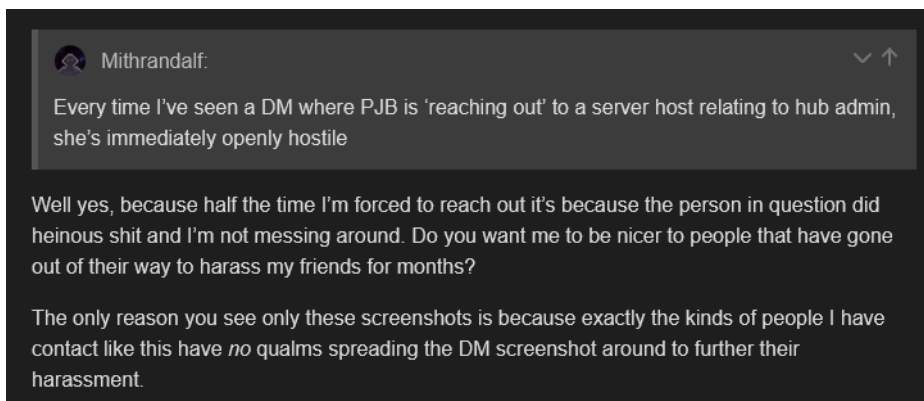

RF3.10
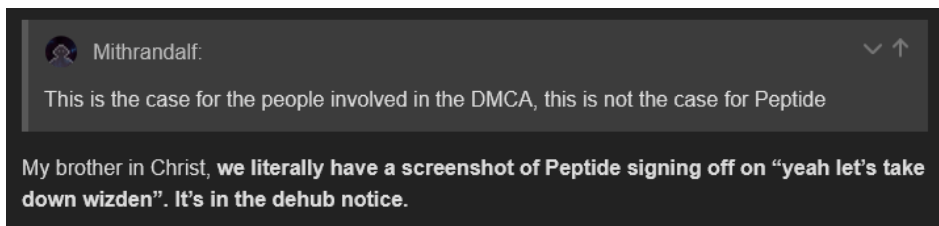

I presume you mean Figure R3 above? I can only see two screenshots of my messages at a glance in the dehub notice and one of them is R3 and literally does not say that? https://forum.spacestation14.com/t/2024-12-17-dehubbing-of-einstein-engines-servers/15111

Again, make up your own head canon, it's really not that deep.

RF3.11

Again you are the project lead, you have teams of people to do this for you. I know you might be hesitant to do that because of how it was handled in the past causing one person to be burnt out, but really you need better processes for all of this. I've already laid out as much. I'd happily write out a more robust process to highlight it all for you, again wasting my precious time on helping a project whose leader hates me.

And me spreading my screenshots is an effort to harass you? You've said so yourself just above that the strike is a form of communication. I believe in transparency and I have nothing to hide in my DMs. I have not spread them for some form of harassment campaign but rather to vindicate myself and to help prove a point that you're not some sort of saint that is blameless in all of this. It's easy to see why I might be against you now and the only way to prove that is with receipts.

————

This document took many hours just to compile all the screenshots and my responses, this is my opinion in places as well as screenshots of fact. And given I don't get the opportunity to respond to a lot of these places due to being banned, this is my opportunity now so hopefully it isn't censored. If I've somehow offended anyone with this document or something is incorrect then let me know and I'll issue an update and statement.