

@ Pohon BBS

Imageboard Textboard News

Go back: thread mode | tree mode | sub tree

#6.

Published: [2024-01-05 \[Fri\] 09:14](#), by kaguya

>but I'm not sure anyone really knows

It shows up on CloudFlare when the traffic of a site dramatically increases, so I know for certain thanks to that system.

There is one guy allegedly from the Gülen movement on kereste (He often talks about it and I believe he did show some proof too, but I'd still take it with a grain of salt) that sometimes attacks the site, though it's unrelated to the actual movement. He is technically savvy enough to have caused us trouble in the past, but he didn't claim this attack was his so far which is a bit uncharacteristic for him.

>Many hours later/the next day, kaguya got hit with a service termination

>email

It came during the same day they didn't have technicians available, past 17 UTC.

Also Terrahost dropped kiwifarms in july 2023 after hosting them for 8 months, so I wanted it to known that they are simply not an imageboard friendly host anymore. There are cheaper alternatives that seem to be more suitable to host questionable websites like ours'.

Also see: <https://www.heyuri.net/#news60>

▶ New Reply

Parents

#5.

Published: 2024-01-05 [Fri] 07:59, by Anonymous

>both can't be true (or at least i hope not)

Actually, they can ^^;

1. On January 1st, the servers were DDoS'd - kaguya implied that it was related to Kereste (Turkish imageboard hosted on the same servers), but I'm not sure anyone really knows. Neither kaguya nor "bobo" has mentioned VidLii once in regards to this, so I'm not sure where that rumor came from

2. Kaguya contacted the server host for assistance and received a response stating that the required technicians weren't available until the 2nd due to it being New Year's Day

3. Many hours later/the next day, kaguya got hit with a service termination email. The stated reason was along the lines of "copyright breaches and unlawful content", plus something about requiring "too much resources" (as in, the server host didn't have enough staff/patience/desire to deal with all the reports, complaints, etc.)

Kaguya said their claims were bullshit since they hadn't received any requests from the server host in 2 months, and most of the past problems were related to soyjak.party (which had moved elsewhere ages ago)

Sidenote: Heyuri's new servers have been DDoS'd a couple of times already since coming back online

#3.

Published: 2024-01-05 [Fri] 07:27, by Anonymous

It seems that Heyuri is back up, while ayashii remains down. Some more commentary on recent downtime comes from #heyuri:

< Flair> Kaguya said Heyuri is down because the server host don't want to deal with reports

< Flair> some others said it's because VidlII was attacked and Heyuri got caught in the middle

< Flair> both can't be true (or at least i hope not)

#2. Heyuri Downtime

Published: 2024-01-04 [Thu] 03:37, by Anonymous

Heyuri, Ayashii, and Vidlii have been down for several days; apparently, a rival network is DDOSing them. Kaguya said they are currently switching hosts and the network should be back up in a few days.

A member of #heyuri reports the following on 2023-01-03 at 03:06:

< tsubo> Those BitView faggots DDoSed VidLii, which took down Heyuri
(and Ayashii to an extent) along with it.

As an unrelated note: World2ch.net is still up, which I had assumed before was part of the Heyuri Network (formerly Kolyma) but apparently it is not.

#1. Imageboard Textboard News

Published: 2024-01-04 [Thu] 03:33, by Anonymous

New *chan appear? Old *chan die?
Any notable events or happenings?

Here we discuss all current news and drama in this funny little slice of the internet.