

Sessey/Jeff is not an honest person.

For those reading who already know of Sessey, it is likely that you are already aware that he has somewhat of a reputation as a “troll” or a “jokester.” Unfortunately, this pattern of dishonest behavior goes beyond mere trolling. Several pieces of art in his DeviantArt gallery are stolen and posted without credit in a thinly veiled attempt to pass them off as his own, which he has actually admitted to at one point, while condescendingly excusing his behavior by saying that these pieces are “obviously not his,” essentially saying that if someone is gullible enough to believe he drew them, it’s their problem and not his. Especially for someone who has complained extensively about people using his work without giving him acknowledgement or compensation (and has even made empty threats of legal action because of this), this comes across as particularly shameless and hypocritical of him.

In a more serious example, Sessey has attempted to defraud and intimidate people by falsely claiming that he is the legal owner of the Jeff the Killer trademark. This claim is not true, and judging by the paper trail documenting the history of the trademark over the years, has never been true. To evaluate and promptly disprove Sessey’s claim of ownership, we will begin by presenting what he has for proof in that regard: “A contract, and the memory of creating Jeff.” Sessey wrote in a 2017 comment. When asked if he could provide any supporting documentation for either, he responded, “unfortunately not.”

Deceiving people to cover up unethical – if not outright illegal – behavior is not at all unprecedented from Sessey, and if there was any doubt remaining about this fact before, this evidence should extinguish that doubt entirely. Now that we have established this, we can move on to the main point of this section, and that is that...

Sessey knows.

None of this abuse happened beneath Sessey’s notice.

Sessey is not only fully aware of Brandon’s behavior, but has in some cases seemed to actively excuse and enable it, even if he has made at least a few attempts in the past to talk Brandon down from doing things like shooting a rifle while blackout drunk. Brandon loves and idolizes his older brother Jeff, and has referred to him as a “mentor” who he would kill and die for; the most important person in his life and the one who showed him how to be a man. As Brandon himself described it: “My brother is me and I am my brother, you can’t have one without having the other.” Especially since their father became critically ill and eventually passed away when they were both young adults, it is probably not much of a stretch to say that Sessey is the single most influential male role model in Brandon’s life.

It is not unlikely that Sessey may have faced something similar to parentification (even if he was, being 21 at the time, older than the typical example), as the oldest brother tends to have the role of “new man of the house” forced upon them in these situations. To say he is completely responsible for Brandon's behavior and the way he turned out would not be reasonable. How can you be the perfect role model and show someone how to be a man when you've barely just become a man yourself? Nonetheless, this does not change the fact that when Sesseur talks, Brandon listens.

Sesseur and Brandon were the adults when it came to Brandon's inappropriate relationship, not Carol. Carol, like many people in the Creepypasta fandom, was very young as well as somewhat isolated, with unconventional interests that might have made it hard for her to connect with other people her age. Anyone who has ever been a young teenager likely remembers what a confusing stage of life it is, and how strong the desire for identity and a place to fit in is. And to have the author of one of your favorite works not only personally acknowledge you, but offer you a chance to be their friend would be very difficult to pass up for a young person in that situation. Who doesn't dream of hanging out with their idol at that age?

The balance of power in their interactions was overwhelmingly on their side. They knew how old she was. They knew it was illegal and wrong. No one was forcing either of them to interact with her, and they could have walked away from the situation at any point over the two years Brandon was involved with her. Even if Brandon was not willing to do so, Sesseur, being Brandon's older brother and moral compass of sorts, could have easily put the brakes on what was going on by simply speaking up. But he didn't.

Sesseur despises women and is a chronic victim-blamer.

Then tossed on a bed for days, barely fed as the victim has no chance but to shit and piss herself and wallow in her own fetid misery. Sepsis comes in and the poor thing dies in agony.

This is not an edgy 15 year old. This is a 31-year-old man posting this, completely unsolicited and unrelated to the main topic of the post.

Sesseur, while not sharing the pattern of overt violent tendencies as his younger brother Brandon and being at least relatively more prudent, would appear to have more than his own share of Hanging out with a 17 year old who is practically adult doesn't ring pedophile. But people of course will liken 17 year olds to 5 year olds because of idiocy. Get real. you're all just trying to look "moral".

Women are such pure angels! These types of women are why males mature into despising women.

In addition to having a substantial post history of intensely demeaning comments towards women and seemingly attempting to excuse pedophilia, Sesseur has engaged in near textbook examples of a classic, highly common abuser tactic: victim-blaming or DARVO (Deny, Attack, Reverse Victim and Offender), having swept his brother's abuse of young girls under the rug by dismissing Brandon's victims and attempting to smear them as "liars," "manipulators," or "crazy" to turn people against them.

Almost everything in this DM is contrary to what was actually documented in the official police report. The teenage victims were not “blowing it out of proportion,” but were in fact in very serious danger from their adult cousin Brandon seizing both of them by the neck. While the police report stated that the two victims were still able to breathe when he did so, it is a common misconception that this cannot cause harm. Even if you can still breathe through your nose and mouth while someone is holding your throat, it is still possible for blood flow to the brain to be cut off from the compression of the carotid arteries, potentially resulting in serious permanent damage or even death, even when the act itself leaves little to no visible bruising and does not cause much pain. And judging by the fact that one victim was observed to have a visible scratch on her neck with the other girl allegedly forcefully thrown onto the bed and straddled, it does not appear that Brandon was making any particular effort to be gentle with either of them.

It is worth pointing out that a domestic abuser grabbing their victim(s) by the neck has been identified as one of the most significant indicators that the abuser may eventually kill their victim\(s\). At no point in the police report did either of the victims attempt to “call off the cops,” and while it was eventually dropped as a nolle prosequi, the case dragged on for four months before the victims finally decided to withdraw charges against him, suggesting that they were not immediately inclined to let the issue slide.

Sesseur is still directing fans to Brandon

People are being incredibly harsh, and I hate seeing him labeled as a liar when, in reality, JTK wouldn't even exist without him.

But that doesn't explain why they are on Japanese sites from 2005?

Wouldn't have Jeff been a child in 2005?
